It's tough to get the right loan.
"You can tell they really know this process... that means I know I'm getting the best loan for me."

IPI/Skyscraper introduces our One Step construction loan.

Great rates. Zero points. Single closing.

At IPI Skyscraper, we understand just how difficult it can be to buy land and to build your dream house. Typically, you'd start with a short-term land loan, then go to a construction loan and finally an "end loan" or conventional mortgage. And typically, you'd pay points or fees every step of the way. Not to mention the aggravation of separate closings.

Not anymore. IPI is proud to announce our One Step construction loan. It's the only zero-point, single-closing land/construction/end loan available that is underwritten entirely on site in our Main Street, Bridgehampton office. This comprehensive program offers you a single interest rate for all three phases of your project, from beginning to end. And most important, IPI locks in your interest rate—in advance, at no additional cost—for 12 months, not for 60 days like other brokers or banks.

We can offer innovative programs like our One Step construction loan because we've consolidated our loan officers, processors, underwriters and closers under one roof. Our experienced mortgage professionals represent more than 100 preferred lenders, so we can find the best possible program at the best possible price for you. And because IPI is the largest mortgage broker in the Northeast, you get the best of two worlds: New York big and Hamptons local.

At IPI Skyscraper, we hammer out all the details; of our One Step construction loans up front — so you don't get hammered by unnecessary fees.

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Summer Citizenship

Pass This Quiz And You Will Qualify To Vote In Local Affairs

By Dan Rattiner

An article on the front page of The New York Times last week has stirred considerable discussion in these parts. It concerned the fact that the wealthy summer residents come out in June and enjoy their homes for three months, go back to the city, then come out for a weekend here and a weekend there, and at the end of the year get a huge real estate tax bill from the Village. This tax pays for schools, highway departments, police salaries and administration, and the summer people are happy to pay it, but unhappy because they cannot vote and therefore influence how it is spent. It is un-American.

The Times wrote about a situation that has been simmering for many years, where the residents of Meadow Lane in Southampton have to pay a thousand dollars and more a year for Town Water, which should come to them through a pipe that runs along the sidewalk. The trouble is the pipe was severed during the Hurricane of '38 and never repaired. Drinking water has not been in the pipe for more than sixty years.

To make matters worse, another branch of this same water pipe goes to year round homes in Hampton Bays and they get water. And they pay a lot less for it because of the summer people on Meadow Lane. And they are also able to vote."

No one in his right mind can defend a water authority which year after year charges for water they do not deliver. Obviously it is wrong. And obviously it is wrong that nothing is being done about it. But the issue is much larger than that.

Our country was founded on the issue of no taxation without representation. But it was also founded on the issue of one man one vote. You cannot vote twice, once in New York and once in the Hamptons.

True or False:
It is okay to bulldoze a stand of trees provided it is done at night.

Finally, our country was founded on the basis of good manners and being kind to your fellow men, especially those who are less fortunate financially. So this protest by the residents of Meadow Lane, who live in mansions that are worth $20 million and more, is a quiet one. As one Meadow Lane resident said — he doesn't mind giving money away — to charities for example — but he does mind being ripped off.

This debate — whether to give the summer people the right to a vote — has been going on for years, among the summer people at the clubs, and among the local people at town hall, where each of these groups gets to talk to themselves. The fact is, there are now several states, among them North Dakota, which allow second home owners to have voting rights on local issues if they have a second home there.But that's North Dakota.

Dan's Papers believes that second home owners should be treated in the same way that immigrants who come from a foreign land are treated when they come to America. They have to serve a number of years here without citizenship, retaining the citizenship of where they have come from. And then they have to take a test. If they pass the test, which involves understanding much of the history, geography, Dan's Papers Executive Editor, Jerry Cimisi of Sag Harbor, was awarded a first place prize from the Press Club of Long Island last week in their annual media awards contest. He received the award in the non-deadline news weeklies category for his continuing series on TWA Flight 800.

In Manhattan, meanwhile, East Hampton's Sean (Puffy) Combs won the Songwriter of the Year Award at the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers 11th Annual Rhythm and Soul Music Awards. Combs wrote the hit songs "All Night Long" and "Love Like This." The ceremony was held at the Hammerstein Ballroom.

Mel Brooks' movie, The Producers, is being made into a Broadway show, with songs, music and lyrics by Mel Brooks. Nathan Lane is in the lead. "Springtime For Hitler," by Mel Brooks, probably the funniest song in the movie, is being retained for the show. Mel Brooks is renting in Southampton this summer.

Martin Gottfried is writing a major critical study of the life and work of playwright Arthur Miller, who rented in Amagansett many years ago with his then-wife Marilyn Monroe.

Tom Harris, who has a house in Sag Harbor, has recently returned from Italy, where he was on location for the filming of Hannibal, which stars Anthony Hopkins and Julie Ann Moore. The movie has a different and less horrible ending than the book. Is that better or worse?

Former Senator Alfonse D'Amato, is fielding his own polo team when this summer's Hampton polo games begin. Hmm.

Among those expected at Peter and Kaycee Jennings' fourth annual Jazz at Jennings' benefit in Bridghemapton June 24 are Ahmet and Mica Ertegun, Steve Croft, Don Hewitt and Dan Rather.

A not so funny joke. You finally get a builder to come and give you an estimate. "What do you need done?" "I need this nail hammered into this board." "That'll be $3,200." "OK. Can you come tomorrow?" "No. I'm booked until October."

Mecox' Howard Stringer, who is the CEO of Sony, spoke at a gathering of American aviators in England for a WWII reunion celebration. Stringer, born in Wales, has two passports, British and American, was the son of an RAF officer, works in America for a Japanese company, and was earlier this year knighted by the Queen. It doesn't get much better than that.

BEE IN BALANCE

A GUIDE TO HEALING THE WHOLE PERSON WITH HONEYBEES, ORIENTAL MEDICINE, & COMMON SENSE

AMBER ROSE, L.Ac., L.C.S.W., has been a healer all her life. After graduating with special honors from the Universities of Chicago and Iowa, she went on to study at the Traditional Acupuncture Institute in Columbia, Maryland. Just as her psychotherapy experience alerted her to the value of acupuncture, Amber's acupuncture experience led her to Bee Venom Therapy (BVT). In this book, Amber shares her discovery of the healing miracles available with BVT; this approach to healing is unlike anything you've ever seen before. It is a synthesis of her experience with psychotherapy, acupuncture, and the remarkable healing power of honeybees

"A LITTLE BIT OF BEES, A LITTLE BIT OF GOD, & A WHOLE LOT OF ME!"

Lonny's Story—A Testament to the Miracle of Bee Venom Therapy

I got my first symptoms in 1983. My left eye went blind but the doctors had no idea what was wrong. The doctors put me in the hospital. I will never forget this one day when I saw an old man crying because he couldn't see. I remember thinking, "I'm so lucky . . . at least I still have one good eye!" A month later the doctors told me that they thought I had MS. I had no idea what that was. Then several months later I began to have trouble with my right eye. On January 11, 1985, I was on my way out of the community center when I realized that I couldn't see anything at all. I was too scared to tell the receptionist that I was blind.

Some time later I began to have trouble walking. The doctors gave me steroids, which caused me to develop sugar diabetes. In June 1987, I had another flare up. I couldn't hold my fork, my hands and arms became weak, and I lost all the strength in my legs. I was afraid I would never walk again. I had my ups and downs after that. I was in and out of the hospital for years and eventually I went into a nursing home in August of 1992, at the age of 36.

In September of 1993, I had my first 6 bee stings. I have been feeling better ever since. It has been uphill for me all the way. I have had no bad days. I owe it all to Pat Wagner and Amber Rose. It used to take two nurses to help me transfer from the bed to the wheelchair. After the first few weeks of bee stings it only took one nurse to help me. Then I started wheeling myself around in the chair, because I had more strength in my arms.

My arms and hands have gotten so strong now that I can feed myself for the first time in years. I can hold my radio and change the stations on my own. This makes me feel good about myself. I like doing things for myself.

On March 20, 1994, I had my miracle. I started to walk again. I have been using the parallel bars and the walker. This is really something! I'm gonna get out of here! People ask how I did it and this is what I say, "A little bit of bees, a little bit of God, and a whole lot of me!"

"Uplifting . . . a masterpiece!"
—Charles Mraz, [illegible]

"Amber [illegible] . . . help [illegible] discover a miracle!"
—Pat Wagner, [illegible]

AT STONY BROOK AN INCREDIBLE JOURNEY BEGINS WITH A CARDBOARD BOAT.

The annual student/faculty Roth Pond Regatta. The rules are simple: all boats must be homemade, and only six materials can be used—only two of which, duct tape and paint, resist water. The rewards are better: a chance to develop skills that will help the student to navigate through college.

In many ways, the Regatta is a metaphor for how we approach education at Stony Brook. Just as faculty and students must work together, the undergraduate experience must be a collaborative process between learning and life.

This kind of thinking has led to Stony Brook's becoming one of the top public research universities, as shown in a recent study published by Johns Hopkins University Press. In only forty years we've become the national model for undergraduate education at a research university.

This kind of environment has led to some of the world's most important discoveries. More importantly, it leads to a wonderful college experience. After all, the more you learn from the journey, the more you appreciate the destination.

Even in a cardboard boat.

THERE'S A LOT TO DISCOVER AT STONY BROOK

- The most distant galaxies were discovered by Stony Brook faculty.
- The cause of Lyme disease was discovered by Stony Brook faculty.
- Bar code technology was discovered by Stony Brook faculty.
- The link between smoking and emphysema was discovered by Stony Brook faculty.
- The world's most primitive fossil bird was discovered by Stony Brook faculty.

Stony Brook is an affirmative action/equal opportunity educator.

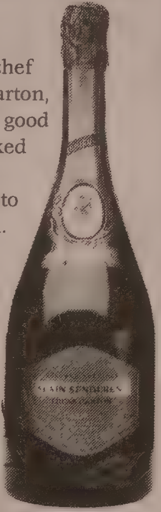
Champagne Demoiselle Reserve Special of Lucas Carton



FROM ALAIN SENDERENS

Alain Senderens, the renowned chef of Paris' famed restaurant Lucas Carton, explains: "In 1993, when I met my good friend Paul-Francois Vranken, I asked him to create a special cuvée of Champagne that I would be proud to serve to the guests of Lucas Carton. After much research M. Vranken created Champagne Demoiselle Reserve Special Lucas Carton.

THE TASTE

It is a very dry Champagne that imparts a buttery flavor on the palate and it was created to be consumed with the cuisine of my beloved restaurant." (1140)

WINES BY MORRELL
BORDEAUX
Red Horse Market
....EAST HAMPTON NEW YORK....

Wines By Morrell

Possibly one of the most attractive wine shops in the country is presently in East Hampton. Located at 74 Montauk Highway in the Red Horse Shopping Mall, the shop features an extensive collection of representative wines and spirits from around the world including a large number of cold sakes, the finest wines from Long Island, summer roses, and a knowledgeable staff focused on service. The shop also features a climate controlled wine vault (Old & Rare Room), antique wine posters, wine antiques on consignment and a wine tasting area highlighted by a seven foot diameter tunneau or wine barrel built in Paris in 1850.

Various old wine and liquor bottles adorn the interior and one can find old maderas from the late 1800's as well as large casks of whisky from 1865 still in their original wooden enclosures.

Starting on Memorial Day Weekend and continuing each week on Saturdays from 4-7 p.m., the store will conduct wine tastings with various vineyards and producers featuring their best wines. In additional to the complementary wine, each presenter will share details about the wine, how it was made and how it should be served. An extensive collection of wines and spirits and friendly service make Wines By Morrell an exciting and unique shop to drop by and surround yourself in wine memorabilia and good conversation. So come on by and sit around the outdoor water fountain while sipping a cool glass of whatever suits your fancy.

pledges and songs of the United States, then they can be sworn in as citizens.

Dan's Papers has been in business for forty years. As an institution that has come to understand the traditions and history of this place, we think we are fully qualified to prepare and administer a citizenship test to the summer people. The summer people MUST understand what this place is all about if they want to vote here. Here's the test. Some of the correct answers are at the end.

1. (Essay. 15 minutes). When the first English settlers arrived by boat in 1639, the first words spoken were by a woman who said "For Conscience Sakes we have Landed." That place has since then been known as Conscience Point. Explain a. where this boatload of people came from, b. why they came here and c. what this woman meant when she said that.

2. (Multiple Choice 1 minute) The Montauk Lighthouse was ordered built in 1786 by a. George Washington b. Donald Trump c. Ulysses S. Grant d. Joan of Arc.

3. (Essay. 5 minutes). Who built those big wooden windmills that you see all over the Hamptons and why?

4. (Mathematics Question. 3 minutes). If one linear meter of oceanfront land in Southampton has a value of $130,000, the minimum zoning is 5 acres per home and 17% of the land is unbuildable wetlands, how many linear feet of oceanfront would be required to build a legal oceanfront house in that town? In East Hampton, in a 7 acre zoning area with 22% wetlands, 85% of which are on the Federal Register of Historic Places?

5. (Single sentence answer. 2 minutes). During the Revolution, on which side did East Enders side? Why?

6. (Multiple Choice Question. 4 minutes). When the British General Howe demanded that East Enders sign a pledge of loyalty to the king, how did East Enders react? a. They burned it. b. Everyone signed it. c. Some signed it right away and others argued for awhile and then signed it.

7. There is a place in East Hampton Town called Fireplace, another called Springs and another called Indian Wells. Why?

8. Write the words to the Pledge of Allegiance to the Hamptons.

9. The Hamptons have been described as one of the "Five Great Places in the World" in terms of scenery, beaches, farmland and fishing. Name the environmental organization that designated the Hamptons this way and write the amount of money you are willing to donate to that organization. Leave off the last three zeros.

10. True or false. a. The Hamptons have been described as having streets paved with gold, b. being a land of milk and honey or c. having the roofs of homes interlaced with fish.

11. (Essay 10 Minutes) Write the story of the wreck of the Circassion in Mecox, the attempt to salvage her and the loss of all the Shinnecock Indian braves in the subsequent ice storm. Write this without mentioning Steven Spielberg.

12. Explain why it is wrong to fill in wetlands, build a seawall or spray toxic pesticides on farmland.

13. True or false: It is okay to bulldoze down a stand of trees provided it is done at night.

14. True or false: Every single citizen of the United States has the right to come to the Hamptons and sit on the beach in front of your house below the high water mark.

15. Piping plovers are little birds that nest on the beach. They are an endangered species. During the mating, nesting and hatching seasons, any beach that has piping plovers on it is a. Off limits to the public, b. Is a tourist attraction at which visitors are charged to stand behind ropes and watch, c. A beach that should be bulldozed over.

16. True or false: During World War II, German saboteurs in full Nazi uniforms came ashore in rubber boats launched from German U-Boats that surfaced just offshore of Amagansett. The saboteurs were caught, convicted and hung.

17. What was the reason that Goodie Garlicke, a resident of East Hampton, was tried as a witch?

18. True or false: Fishhook Mulford went to London with a handwritten document, signed by the settlers, asking that they not be taxed for the selling of the whale oil they obtained by catching whales off the Hamptons. He got his name "Fishhook" because, when he went to London he did not want the London pickpockets to get the money he had in his pocket. Unfortunately, that is where he also kept the document.

A Commencement Address To Teenagers Graduating High School And Going To College

By Dan Rattiner

This article is addressed to all the 17 year olds in town. In the next week or two you'll be graduating and I suppose you think this is going to be a liberating experience: you'll be launched into a new world where no one knows the screw ups you did trying to be a teenager during the last four years. You can make a fresh start.

Certainly that's what I thought when I graduated from high school. In the fall I went off to the University of Rochester for what they called "Orientation Week."

Rochester is a very long way from Eastern Long Island and there was absolutely no one from these parts who went there, or at least anyone I knew of. We all arrived on campus laden with luggage. We were taken to our dorm rooms and told to settle in and then meet in the cafeteria to hear a welcome from the dean of students.

My first challenge, of course, was to find the cafeteria. No problem.

The speech largely involved statistics, how many of us were in the upper fifty percent of the graduating high school class, how many of us were from New England, Florida, and so on. I looked around. There was absolutely no one in this room who knew how painful it was for me to grow up, how I had failed to make the baseball team, how the girl I wanted to go to the senior prom with had given me the cold shoulder. For all anybody knew, I could have been a big man on the high school campus. It really was like starting over.

And then my pulse quickened. The Dean continued talking and I realized that my big chance was at hand. The first things that were going to happen in the new school year, he said, were elections. The freshman would elect within two weeks. There would be a president, vice president, secretary and a treasurer. Anybody who wanted to, could sign up and run.

Three days before the elections, however, I saw a sign that made me realize my effort was doomed.

There was no way that anyone could possibly know whom to vote for after such a brief length of time. I'd sign up and run for office. Not president, of course. After all, I was still this big screw up and I would probably make terrible decisions like selling the freshmen class to the University of Buffalo. The logical choice was to run for treasurer. I've always been good with numbers. I wasn't going take some girly job like secretary, and vice president sounded like some ceremonial job.

Signing up to run, as it turned out, was simply a matter, of well, signing up. I was one of the first people to do so right after that meeting. I was gratified to know there was only one other individual to be running for treasurer – someone with the unlikely name of Marvin Kendle.

I had learned in high school how to put posters up on trees. I was real good at it. I had also learned how to come up with snappy sayings for those posters. Marvin Kendle was dog meat.

During the next few days I put "Vote for Dan Rattiner" on just about every tree on the campus. There were other posters up for other candidates, of course, and, as a matter of fact, it made the campus look sort of a mess, but this was in the early days of environmentalism and the virtue of student enthusiasm was still in its prime. That nearly half of all the signs bore my name was merely a sign of my industriousness, the sort of virtue that you'd want in a treasurer of the freshman class.

Three days before the elections, however, I saw a sign in the student union that made me realize my effort was doomed. "Freshmen," it said, "meet your next treasurer, Red Portugal, in the student Rathskeller, 4 p.m., the day before Election Day."

I went outside and there on a tree was another sign for Red Portugal.

"Vote For Red Portugal, Freshman Class Treasurer," was on a bed sheet strung from two windows of the dormitory. Somebody named "Marvin" I could handle. But there was no way, in a world where nobody knew anybody, that somebody named Rattiner was going to beat somebody named "Red Portugal."

And so that's what happened. But there is a moral to this story. Apparently, at the first meeting of the officers of the freshmen class, there were a whole lot of posts that had to be handed out that were not elective. Among them was Social Director. On the strength of my second place finish to Red Portugal – and I had lost to him by only four or five percentage points, ahead of three also rans – somebody suggested I be asked to be thee social director for the freshman class.

"He damned near beat Red Portugal," was the theme of this discussion.

So a few days later, a couple of school officers – and one of them was Red Portugal, with his bright red hair and Robert Kennedy-like front teeth – came by my dorm room to ask if I'd be interested.

"We need someone to organize pep rallies and car washes and the prom," I was told. It would involve a lot of crepe paper to hang and balloons to inflate. "You're certainly somebody who could get the word out,"

Of course I took the job.

What was going through my mind was, Well, this ought to be a good way to meet girls. And so I did. ●

Don't Miss The Big OJ Simpson Lie Detector Test Special On Pay Per View

By Dan Rattiner

O. J. Simpson was in the news last week. One of his "Dream Team" lawyers, Robert Shapiro, said in an interview that contrary to what was put out at the time, O. J. took a lie detector test that had been arranged by his lawyers and had flunked it badly. They had kept it under wraps.

O. J.'s response to this was to say he never took a lie detector test and so Shapiro must have made this story up.

The next day he had an even stronger offer. He would go on Pay Per View and take the lie detector test. He's always claimed he didn't kill his wife. He'd be asked "Did You Kill Nicole Simpson?" and he'd say no. And then the needles would register whatever they would register.

> I couldn't believe that I was getting this excited about paying 25 cents to look into a barrel.

It wouldn't really matter what the outcome was. He's already living in disgrace. This way, even if the outcome was he was telling a big whopper, he could go off with a big hunk of money to the bank. And of course, he wouldn't have to go off to jail. You can't be tried twice for the same crime. This is America.

I've been trying to imagine whether or not I would pay the $35 to watch O. J.'s lie detector test. We all have our little secrets. We all have a little angel hovering over one shoulder and a little devil hovering over the other. Give money to a man who very likely committed a brutal double murder? Never.

Of course, you won't just pay the $35, sit down and then O. J. would walk in and ten minutes later it would be all over. The Pay Per View people would draw it out into a three hour extravaganza. There'd be commentary by Geraldo, by Larry King, by boxing analyst Larry Bernstein. They'd have a debate between William F. Buckley Jr. on the one side and Louis Farrakan on the other. They'd quote the oddsmakers. In fact, very likely, the show would begin with a helicopter swooping in at night over a big Las Vegas hotel. Las Vegas is the only place they could hold something like this.

At my house, the evening of the event, I would be sitting in my easy chair, flicking through the channels with my remote, and every once in a while come upon the notice on the pay per view channel that all I had to do was to call this number and order O.J Versus The Lie Detector for $35. I'd keep looking at my telephone. Well, if I succumbed, it would just be between me, the phone company and the cable company. And the private investigators and computer hackers who pry into my personal life. And my conscience. No, I wouldn't succumb.

A day after I heard about O. J.'s offer, Cathie and I and some friends went to see the Broadway show Penn and Teller, an evening of comedy and magic, performed by two men who bear those names. During the first half of the show, Penn is found to have been inside a small wooden barrel on stage. It seems amazing he has gotten in there, he is six seven and weighs two hundred eighty pounds, and when he leaps out he is revealing how the trick about the barrel was done. But how could he have gotten in there?

"We'll be going to a fifteen minute intermission in a few minutes," Penn says, "and you know they don't pay us to do this show. So for the fifteen minutes, I am going to give to you the opportunity to see if I really am in this barrel. The barrel will be onstage. And my partner Teller will be at the front of the stage selling these wonderful Penn and Teller t-shirts for $20. Make a long line in the aisle over here, climb the stairs, we'll be very grateful to you for buying our t-shirt, and then you can look in the barrel. And if you don't have $20, then Teller will sell you a ticket to look into the barrel for 25 cents. And if you don't have 25 cents, then whatever you have in your pocket. Please. Please be generous. I speak on behalf of my wife. Help us have a Christmas this year."

Finally

When the intermission came a few minutes later, after a few moments hesitation, I got up from my seat and, along with Cathie, joined the long line forming in the aisle. It's a big theatre. We were about half way back. All the house lights were up and up at the front of the line — there was a lot of noisy pushing and shoving — people were climbing the stairs to the stage, giving Teller some money, peering into the barrel, then moving along and going back down some stairs to another aisle.

I found myself looking at the expressions of the people on stage as they peered in. Yes, they were talking to somebody inside the barrel. Penn? I was getting quite excited. Then some peope shoved in front of me on the line and it made me angry. New Yorkers. If enough people did that the fifteen minute intermission would be over before we got there. We'd be turned away. We'd never be able to look in the barrel.

I couldn't believe that I was getting this excited about paying 25 cents to look into a barrel. But it was true. Amazing. It is truly amazing what our curiousity can bring us to.

I read that the fashion world is waiting with bated breath to see if rumors are true that Monica Lewinsky is going to be bringing out her own perfume. She had been invited, and did, make a presentation at the fragrance industry's FiFi awards the other night.

Maybe we could do a pay per view lie detector test with Monica in which she is asked the question of whether or not she performed fellatio on the President to which she would answer yes since both of them have agreed that happened. The other questions: did he perform a roughly similar act on her? Did they perform — how shall I put this —congress? (A pun.) $35.

Or how about another Pay Per View, to raise money for the President, where the President is put into that side room in the oval office with a bushy tailed young intern again and the door is closed and this time the VIEWERS vote — dialing one number for YES and another number for NO — about whether they think anything will happen, and at the end of the voting Clinton and the intern come out, read the results, announce that majority rules, and go back in. Surely there are still campaign debts to pay off.

Oh, I forgot. Yes, Penn was in the barrel. ●

Wagnerian Thunderstorm Storm Knocks Out WLNG and Terrifies NYC Bound Motorists

By Dan Rattiner

A vicious thunderstorm roared through the East End last Sunday evening. People sitting in the long line of cars heading back to the city around six p.m. surely could not believe their eyes. In front of them, the sun was getting lower and lower in the sky, soon to start a beautiful sunset. But then, in minutes, a line of angry black clouds moved in from the north and the sun went out and everything went dark. Lightning bolts fired down. Now the rains came and the winds howled. What the hell else could happen?

People were soon to find out. At the home of Maria Tennariello on Millstone Road in Noyac, her dog Tino expressed a desire to go out. Maria let the pooch out the door, then watched as he got about fifteen feet across the deck, heading for the stairs, when suddenly there was a tremendous bang. The dog sprang six feet straight up, let out one yip and ran back in the house. Then the lights went out. And then the rains came. And a smell of fried electronics permeated the building.

It soon became apparent that every phone in the house had melted, that the TV and VCR were fried, that there was neither hot water because the heater had exploded, or heat because the boiler had been knocked out. Also the alarm system was toast. Maria had no idea what to do. As the winds howled, a police car pulled into the driveway, having been summoned by the alarm company. (They assume a disabled alarm system is the work of a burglar. They call the cops.) The rain was coming down in buckets. But by the time the police officer put on his yellow slicker, got out of the car and walked up the deck stairs, the rain had stopped. Now it was sunny again.

There were sporadic power outages throughout the Hamptons because of this storm. But none so public as the one that hit the WLNG Radio Station in Sag Harbor.

Ordinarily, it is WLNG that people turn to on their radio dial whenever a hurricane or flood hits the east end. Paul Sidney and his staff have been, for nearly 40 years, quite literally, a comfort in a storm, broadcasting hour after hour in the aftermath of whatever local disaster has struck this place.

This time, though, the disaster struck them! One minute, they were broadcasting from two remote locations – a barbecue at Gurney's Inn in Montauk, and the annual Blessing of the Fleet in Montauk Harbor, coordinating it all from the controls in the radio station building on Red Creek Road in Sag Harbor — when suddenly a lightning bolt struck the main operations control board. To this day, nobody knows exactly how that happened. One minute they were on the air, the next minute, in utter darkness, they were huddling against a wall looking at the smoking remains of the heart of their radio station. There had been no injuries.

There was speculation that the lightning bolt had come up through the floor. Or down the 300 foot broadcasting tower. Anyway, they were off the air. And they continued off the air for nearly an hour and a half until their main base of operations could be transferred to an auxiliary system.

"It's the first time in forty years that Paul Sidney has been shut up," someone said.

When I heard Paul and his crew were back up, though, I called over there. Paul has been running the station for 37 years. I've been running Dan's Papers forty years. We've been through thick and thin together. This was thick.

"Nothing to it," Paul said. "You think this was a tough time? What about the year the Village Police pulled up to the station and called out over bull horns that Red Creek was rising and we had to evacuate. Well, we already knew the creek was rising, it had overflowed its banks and we were already up to our ankles in water so we got out as instructed and we climbed in the remote van and they escorted us to downtown Sag Harbor where we broadcast during the rest of the flood from State Legislator Billy Jones' office on Main Street. We're used to this."

Shazam!

Somebody ought to give Paul Sidney a medal.

Then there was the time Rocco Liccardi was sitting out a rainstorm in his Sag Harbor antique shop, the Black Afghan, when he heard what sounded like a whole school of fish flopping around on the roof of his building. He went outside. And there they were, not only up on the roof, but flopping around on the sidewalk and in the gutter, a whole school of bait fish, scooped up from the harbor perhaps by a water spout and let loose to come raining down on his shop.

Rocco had called me when that happened. I wrote it up in Dan's Papers. Just one of those crazy things.

Wildlife Rescue Center Opens

FacilityTo Nurse Deer And Other Animals Back To Health Opens In Munn's Pond Park

By Janet Berg

The headquarters for the Wildlife Rescue Center of the Hamptons, which has been located in the Sag Harbor home of Ginnie Frati and her husband, Augie, has just moved to a new location at Munn's Pond County Park in Hampton Bays, after months of construction by volunteers.

The President, Sigrid Owens, is in charge of administration, while James Hunter, is Vice President, in charge of designing the center, of the volunteers, and the operation of utilities.

Ginnie Frati, a secretary for 23 years for Suffolk County Public Works, retired in 1997 to take this endeavor on full time as the "animal care person," and Augie, the spokesperson, also helps build cages and works at the center.

It is obvious that the Fratis are both dedicated animal lovers who make this a major part of their lives. When I asked Mrs. Frati how she got started in this, she answered: "Back in 1991, I saw an injured woodchuck on the side of the road, so I pulled my car over to see if I could help. There I was, dressed as a secretary, on my way to work. I didn't know what to do; I was afraid to touch it.

"I then found a pay phone and called the police, and they referred me to wildlife rescuers. I called every one of them, but it was frustrating when I just got answering machines. One man even yelled at me and said to call the police back and tell them to stop giving out my number, and he hung up on me.

"I called the police again and asked if they should just shoot the poor animal to put it out of its misery, but they said they couldn't discharge a firearm. Driving away from that injured animal has haunted me ever since, and I wanted to pursue it."

I asked her if it is true that when humans touch the baby birds the mother abandons them and then she said, "No, that's a myth."

After much experience as a volunteer, and working with Okeanos, Ginnie prepared herself with study books and took tests to get licensed in 1995 (with the NY State DEC) as a Wildlife Rehabilitator.

"But." she informed me. "I was only licensed to do mammals. To do migratory birds, you need another license which entails a multi-page application and is a more difficult process, and also submitting diagrams of flight cages."

Coincidentally, the day before my interview with Mrs. Frati. I found a baby blue jay myself. Actually, my golden retriever found the bird under my deck, far from its nest, and I had to crawl under to get it out. I asked her if it is true that when humans touch the baby birds, the mothers abandon them, and she said, "No, that's entirely a myth."

Most people, like myself, aren't aware of this, and try to mother the bird ourselves. Ginnie advises, "If you find a baby bird out of its nest, it usually belongs out of the nest. The mother will feed it on the ground. The only time you should intervene is if they're a nestling (and have no feathers). Then you can pick them up, warm them with your hands, and put them right back in the nest."

This time of year, the rescue center is getting many calls from people in the same predicament. They think they can feed the bird, which is fun and easy, but that is only the beginning. When the bird is ready to fly, they won't know how to eat, or socialize with other birds; and they most likely die after the first rain, when they will get soaked, as the mother never taught them how to bathe.

Wildlife

It only took a minute for Ginnie Frati to convince me. I knew I had to do the right thing. But, I didn't know how I would break the news to my next door neighbors, the Antunovich's, who already got attached, and named the bird "Goldberg."

The Fratis' have about 45 animals at their home this year, at the beginning of the season, and had 72 at one time last year at the height of the season. The center took on over 500 cases last year, and predicts in a few years, when the animal hospital is completed, they may be able to accept up to 3,000 animals in a year.

She laughed, "My husband will be glad to get his house back."

The Grand Opening for the new facility is July 15, 2000. With enough volunteers, we'll be able to take in every single animal in need. (Domestic animals are cared for by different organizations).

"We try to free up our cages as soon as possible to make room for other animals coming in that we can help. Everything we take in gets put back in the wild within three months," she added.

"We have 25 Rescue Transport Volunteers on the East End and gave a Rescue Transport class in March, where they are trained. They learn how to handle the animals with gloves and nets and towels.

"We have a four-wheel drive truck; but the biggest problem is that the person who finds the injured animal leaves it, and tries to explain where it is to us, then we can't locate it, as it hobbles away in a remote area."

Ginnie recalled the fundraiser at the end of April, when Kim Bassinger and her husband, Alec, who are on the Honorary Committee, joined them

Grouchy Groucho

Stefan Kanfer Talks About The Life Of This Marx Brother In Bookhampton Talk

By Joan Zandell

The scene is Saturday, June 10th at 5:30 p.m. in the upstairs portion of Bookhampton in Easthampton. We've been experiencing a heat wave that has created a bit of a brown out and half the lights in the store are out and the normally chilly air-conditioning is down as well. I imagine somewhere in East Hampton there may be a chipmunk or a squirrel who has just chewed through an electrical wire and is sitting back contentedly picking its teeth. Remarkably, no one in the store seems to notice or mind the change in temperature. The downstairs is filled with book lovers perusing the shelves for their next intriguing read and the upstairs is jammed with Grouchofiles awaiting the arrival of Stephan Kanfer.

I find a seat and look around me, amazed at how jammed the area is despite the heat and obvious lack of light, and notice how lively the crowd seems to be. To pass the time, the two couples in front of me spend the time telling jokes, one couple attempting to surpass the other, pausing occasionally to apologize for the silliness of the joke in advance. As the room continues to fill up and the seats become scarcer, a rather short woman in her late sixties enters wearing shorts, sneakers, a tee shirt and a baseball cap. She is eating an enormous piece of cake that she holds in one hand while her pocketbook is swinging wildly in the other. She looks around the room and spying the author's seat as available, she smiles then plops herself down and proceeds to settle in. She takes two enormous bites from the cake, then notices the bottle of water and glass set aside for the author. She places the cake in a napkin on her lap, and then grabs the bottle of water and opens it taking an enormous gulp. I quietly laugh to myself, thinking how much she resembles Harpo and wonder if Groucho were here whether he would offer her a cigar? Chris Avena, the store's manager handles the situation with his usual aplomb and after a lengthy explanation, the woman agrees to move to an even more comfortable chair so that the author she has come to hear may sit in hers. Still tightly grasping her cake and bottle of water, she happily re-situates herself on the leather sofa, her formerly swinging pocketbook at peace at last, next to her right sneaker on the floor.

Enter Stephan Kanfer. The first thing you notice about Kanfer is how much his mustache resembles Groucho's. Then you notice his beautiful smile and the mischievous twinkle in his eye. He removes his spectacular, signature hat and acknowledges the author Gary Clarke, who wrote the biography of Judy Garland, sitting to his right. As he begins to speak about Groucho he feels compelled to mention the recent reviews of the book.

"There seems to be a feeling that I should have told a happy story. Unfortunately, comedians lives are usually tragic. Groucho's three wives were all substance abusers.

"Chico was a gambler, Zeppo carried a gun and Harpo was naughty but sweet. His mother Minnie pushed him out onto the stage when he was a child. After all, where could you go so far and earn so much without knowing anything?"

One liners start to fly. One morning I shot an elephant in my pajamas. How he got in my pajamas I don't know.

Despite the fact that the audience has heard these one liners hundreds of times before, we laugh, enjoying them all over again.

The garbage man is outside.
Tell him we don't want any.

This crowd knows about Groucho. They've seen A Night at the Opera, A Day at the Races, and Duck Soup numberless times and they've watched The Show of Shows on innumerable occasions. They feel that they know Groucho like a good friend, and now in the presence of Stephan Kanfer they are free to reminisce together about the good old days.

Stephan Kanfer does not let them down. He feeds them little known facts like delectable morsels of caviar right off the spoon, and the audience gulps them down and clamors for more. He reads from his book and the previously noisy audience is so still that you can hear a pin drop. The room seems filled with love and longing for this man called Groucho. When an audience member asks if Kanfer actually met Groucho, Kanfer tells the story of a lunch they shared while he was a reporter at Time Magazine, in which Groucho confided that he actually might have preferred being a doctor or a writer. The audience gasps. Really? How could

The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #110

"...June, June, June, just because it's June, June, June!"

(song from Rogers & Hammerstein's Carousel)

Well, summer has officially begun. We had our annual 10K race Saturday, June 10 which sort of jump starts our summer here. As a public service, I thought I'd make a list of everything you have to do in June.

1. Men: Buy a new kiddie pool. Forget the one you stored in the garage from last year. If it was inflatable, it has a leak. If it was the rigid kind, it has a crack. This happens every year, but you still save the pool through the winter in the futile hope that you won't have to buy a new one this year. If you have an in-ground pool, start getting it ready now. Your family will string you up if they are poolless come July.

2. Women nagging men: Clean the car. Yup, it has to be done. Clean out all the crumpled dirty ferry tickets from under the front seat and find all the missing gloves and mittens from winter. The winter mud has to be removed to make way for summer sand. There are new things to lose in the car, like bathing suit tops and sun screen.

3. Women: Clothes rotation. If you haven't done it yet, you have to do it now. Winter clothes get cleaned and put away and summer clothes come down from the boxes and get aired out.

This is the one and only chance you have to get rid of any undesireable clothes your family made you save from last year.

That "I'm an alcoholic, buy me a beer" tee shirt your teenaged son loves....gone. That god-forsaken pair of burgandy bermuda shorts that your husband loves because he actually thinks he looks good in them....gone. That 34-waist speedo swimsuit your hubby thinks he can still wear that barely covered his basics last year.....gone. The rubber band and two peanut shells bikini your teen daughter wore last year...gone. This is your only chance to "lose" these items.

4. Women: No, you didn't lose any weight and you can't afford a new bathing suit anyway, so just say hello to your faded old faithful. Don't put yourself through the trauma of trying on new bathing suits. Do you think you're really strong enough to see your body in a three way mirror under florescent store lights?

5. Women: You'll probably get paint fever in June. That overwhelming compulsion that something somewhere in the house has to be painted a fresh color. For a week you'll struggle with cream tones versus pastels. Buy the Benjamin Moore paint from Jack's Marina, I found it actually does what it says and covers anything in one coat. Saves time, you don't have to nag him to do a second coat...

Who's Here:

Hugh Carey

Former Governor

Celebrating his 50th year on Shelter Island this summer, at 81years of age, former New York Governor Hugh Carey is looking to the next 50 with great anticipation. I had the pleasure of spending a few hours with the Governor, and one of his sons Paul, on a recent Sunday to discuss the past, present and, most importantly, the future.

Born in Brooklyn, one of six boys, Carey wasted no time starting his own career and family. By the time he had completed a seven-year stint in the Army, where he rose from Sargeant to Colonel and saw 280 days of combat in WW II, and finished law school, he had managed to marry and have three children. This was to be the beginning of what would eventually grow to a successful political career and very large family. When all was said and done, Carey would serve seven terms in Congress, two terms as Governor and he and his wife Helen would produced 14 children.

Shelter Island became a central part of the Carey family early on. After graduating from law school he decided to take the summer off and relax. They saw an ad in the paper for a rental property on Shelter Island and decided, on faith, to take it for the month of August for a mere $200. When they arrived on the island, they were surprised to find out that not only would the owner of the house be living there with them, they would only be allowed to use the kitchen after 8 p.m. each day. With three children to feed, this was clearly not an ideal set up, so they turned around and left. With no where to go, they walked into the local real estate office and asked to see what else was available. With very little rental business on the island to begin with, the realtor revealed that they tended to be choosy about whom they rented to. She told them right off that they didn't want any Catholics, among others. When asked if they were Catholic, Helen replied, "Well, my father was Episcopalian." With that the Realtor questioned them no further and found them a place to stay. Thanks to Helen Carey's quick thinking, there began a tradition that would span half a century and three generations.

Not too long after that first summer on Shelter Island, Carey secured a seat in Congress, representing his hometown of Brooklyn. He was a freshman under John F. Kennedy and remained in Washington for a total of seven terms. As a representative, he began his involvement with the mentally and physically handicapped, a cause he would work for the rest of his life. While in Congress he was assigned to the labor and education committee. One of their major accomplishments was to develop programs to rehabilitate the mentally and physically handicapped, instead of leaving them institutionalized for life, so they could learn a skill and become contributing members of society.

Carey admits that "our government isn't compassionate." However, the programs they came up with appealed to the government as they were creating taxpayers out of otherwise unproductive people. Carey knew that "economic policy tends to drive social policy'" therefore, this was the only way he could help these people and protect their funding when times got tight. "Poverty programs" as they are known are always the first to be cut when the budget gets tight; however, Carey's programs managed to endure.

In 1974 Carey ran for governor of New York and won. He was forced to run against his Democratic Party as they were endorsing another candidate from his area. With that hurdle to overcome, he decided to take his campaign upstate. His idea was to be the "Guy Who Walked the State." He would walk each of the 62 counties spreading his campaign message and shaking hands. His friends and family told him he was crazy. There simply wasn't enough time to walk all of the counties. Since Carey was first a family man, second a politician, they decided to make the campaign a family affair by sending his kids to walk the state spreading the Carey message during their summer vacation. The kids were thrilled. They walked and walked and had a wonderful time. September arrived and the children had managed to walk all the counties save one, Broom County. The children begged to finish what they had begun, but school was starting and begrudgingly the children conceded that their father would have to take care of walking the last county. When the election returns came in, Carey won 61 of the 62 counties. The only one he lost was Broom County. His children never let him live it down, and "Don't forget Broom County!" is an oft repeated cry heard around the Carey house to this day.

Upon becoming Governor, one of the first acts he signed was the Consent Decree, which gave rights to institutionalized, mentally handicapped people. In 1972 Geraldo Rivera had done an expose on an institution called Willowbrook in upstate New York. His report was horrifying. Rivera had smuggled in hidden cameras and recorded the squalid living conditions, barbaric treatment and complete lack of humanity at the institution. The country was horrified. The parents who had entrusted the lives of their handicapped children to this institution were devastated. Worse yet, Willowbrook apparently wasn't an isolated case. Virtually all mental institutions in the country treated their patients more like animals than like human beings.

Carey himself was still in Congress at the time of the expose, but knew that something needed to be done to secure rights for these patients and to get them into rehabilitation programs. The families of the patients went to court to seek rights for their children, but Carey's predecessor refused to concede. When Carey came to power in 1975, one of the first things he did was to sign the Decree. To him it was a no brainer, to the rest of the country it was an example of responsible government, and soon other states followed suit with similar laws of their own. Since leaving office, Carey has maintained his support of programs for the mentally disabled, whom he likes to call "exceptional people" and continues his work through volunteerism and fundraising. In what should be his retirement years, Carey has managed to stay exceedingly busy. His son Paul jokes, "I'm 37 and he's 81 and he goes out more nights of the week than I do."

This month alone he has agreed to speak at the graduation ceremony for a school in Albertson, Long Island known as Disabilities Incorporated. He plans to encourage them to keep trying and keep working, because they can accomplish anything they put their minds to. In addition to his commencement engagement, this month he will also be the Honorary Chairman for the East End Hospice's annual gala fundraiser, which takes place in Quogue each year. The success of such rehabilitation programs and the dedication of the volunteers in programs such as Hospice have made Carey proud.

"That is the side of America I like to brag about," Carey declares. All the while he also serves on the boards of a few corporations, like Snapple, and has been working as a volunteer for the American Battle Monuments Commission, a tribute to his tour in WW II.

For all his good fortune, sadly Carey has seen more than his share of tragedy. His beloved wife Helen passed away in 1974, never seeing her husband take his seat as governor. The mere mention of her name puts a twinkle in Carey's eye and he speaks of her with reverence, respect and unwavering love. She too was a great supporter of the handicapped. Through her volunteer efforts with the Brooklyn Bureau of Community Service, Helen began a camp for the handicapped on Shelter Island. Several of their children worked as counselors there and the project brought the whole family a great feeling of accomplishment. The two-week camp was the absolute highlight in some of these children's lives. "These kids spent 25 weeks of the year looking forward to camp and 25 weeks remembering the great time they had," reflects Carey's son Paul. Unfortunately soon after Helen's untimely death, the camp was closed, as it just couldn't survive without her tireless dedication and work. However, her whole family was amazed that she pulled it off for as many summers as she did, all the while caring for 14 children. Carey also tragically lost two of his sons in 1969 in a car accident. They, along with Helen and a grandchild, are buried on Shelter Island.

Carey reflects on the past with humor and gratitude. His relationship with Frank Sinatra was especially important to him. Remarkably, John F. Kennedy and Carey are the only two Democrats Sinatra ever publicly supported, raising over $600,000 for them.

One of his favorite memories was a visit he and his wife made to the Sinatra home with their children. They had been there awhile and were preparing to leave, when Sinatra commented to Carey that his kids must be starving, and that they would never make it home without something to eat. The last thing Carey wanted to do was to have Sinatra go out of his way for his children, but Ol' Blue Eyes insisted. Then, Sinatra himself went into the kitchen and prepared a spaghetti meal for the kids. While the kids ate, the legendary singer entertained them with stories and jokes. To this day, that experience is one of the fondest memories the Carey family has. Carey managed to buy one of Sinatra's pianos at auction, and claims he holds the rights to sing "New York, New York," although allegedly Sinatra asked Carey if he would sing it "only when I'm in California." Remarkably, Carey was the only public figure invited to Sinatra's funeral.

Carey also loves to talk about the time his good friend Bobby Kennedy and his wife Ethel paid a visit to them on the island. They flew directly onto the island and landed on a tiny airstrip across the street from Carey's house, a harrowing experience Ethel would have soon liked to forget.

Among other memorable moments, one in particular stands out in the Governor's mind. Ethel had fallen ill and was in need of medicine. The local pharmacist was a staunch Republican and took one look at Ethel Kennedy approaching his store, slammed the door, and refused to serve her. Helen Carey banged away on the door insisting he open up. When he realized that Kennedy was Carey's guest, he finally opened up for her and filled her prescription, but he was clearly not happy about it.

Then there was the time Carey attended a Tony Bennett concert at Southampton College. He was injured and forced to wear a neck brace. At the end of the show he asked Bennett to sign it. On the way home they decided to stop into the American Hotel to have a drink. Who should be there but Billy Joel, so Carey decided to ask Joel to sign the brace as well. Carey brags that to this day he is the proud owner of what may be the elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

I don't understand how people's perceptions can vary so much. Even one's own perceptions change over time. We fall in love and out of love. Foods that we once hated become palatable. Fears are replaced. Friends come and go.

One of my earliest food memories has to do with bell peppers. I hated green peppers, even non-spicy peppers. My mother told me they were an acquired taste. They were lumped with arugula in my mind. Now, I love peppers of all kinds. I often keep a hot green pepper by my plate so I can take small bites along with my food. I've grown arugula in my garden for years and I love it. Once a year I would try a bite of bell pepper just to see if I still hated the taste. One year what had seemed bitter suddenly seemed sweet. I still try a sip of beer on occasion. It tastes terrible to me. Obviously my perception of the taste is not in keeping with what most people are experiencing. Beer sells. People love it. I don't think I ever will.

My mother hated the taste of beans. I couldn't believe it. Beans come in all shapes and sizes. Pinto beans don't taste the same as black beans or lentils or garbanzos. She liked hummus but that was about it. Beans are a mainstay of many diets. Indian food is heavily bean based. Mexicans would starve without beans in their diet. I still don't like lima beans but even that could change. I used to hate beets. Now I love them, even raw.

People often complain about the rain. Having lived in the desert, I realize how important the rain is. In years of drought, watering the garden becomes a part of the daily routine. Irrigation systems become essential. Here, we get upset if it rains or even if there is cloud cover for a few days.

I've heard lots of people complain about the size of King Kullen. When I've been in Mexico for months, supermarkets like King Kullen take on a whole new desirability in my mind. I can't wait to have access. Good lettuce, mushrooms, and asparagus become delicacies. When I'm here I take it all for granted.

School has also changed in my perception. I would love to have the time to go back to college. When I was nineteen, I opened my first shop. I couldn't wait to be independent and start making money. I certainly didn't want to "waste" my time in school. Now I would love to study. I want to have the facilities that school has to offer. Wood shop and metal shop and jewelry making would be a dream fulfilled. Access to a ceramic studio would be great, too. My friend Ana Daniel has been teaching at Southampton College. She is extremely knowledgeable. I would like to study history with her. I just don't have the time.

Even our perception of our loved ones is subject to change. I loved my mother. Still, I remember a time when her values were not my values and I wanted to get out of her house to experience my independence. I fell in and out of love with my husband. Fortunately I always fell back in love with him. Friends come and go and sometimes even come back again. Nothing is written in stone. We've been known to hate ourselves on occasion. Let's hope we don't hold on to that one too long!

Conquering fears is up there with our other changeable perception. Things that seemed impossible because of fear can become routine and free you to move on to the next challenge. A friend called from Mexico-City this week. I hadn't spoken to him in a few years. He taught me to fly ultralights (an incredible flying machine). The first day I thought I would never conquer my fear. I was scared to be up in the air and convinced I would never take the controls. Two days later I had no problem with takeoffs but landings were still terrifying. After a few more hours of "touch and goes" (repeated takeoffs and landings) I was more confident. My husband wanted to buy me an ultralight and we had visions of shooting a book on gray whales from a bird's eye view. I haven't flown in a few years and fear have returned. My flight instructor just invited me to visit him in Mexico City. We will fly again. I'm scared but I know I can do this. There is nothing that compares to flying. Man can fly. I can fly. This sport that terrified me also thrills me. Getting past the fear opens new doors and creates new challenge. Changing our perceptions helps.

TEN YEARS AGO

"Sado-Masochism"

June 8, 1990

A strange relationship has developed between the rich and famous who summer in the Hamptons and the local community leaders who comprise our Town Boards. Let us call it, for lack of a better phrase, a sado-masochistic relationship. Maybe this is a bit too harsh. Let us say that nobody in this life gets kicked around unless they let themselves get kicked around and let us just say that in recent days nobody has quite gotten kicked around like the rich and famous who summer in the Hamptons.

Consider the actress Faye Dunaway, standing before the East Hampton Zoning Board presenting nothing less than an Oscar winning performance, fully choreographed and scripted with lawyers and experts, trying to persuade a group of wise local men and women that she should be allowed to build a swimming pool in her yard on Egypt Close. (They turned her down.) There was actress Kathleen Turner in a similar performance, pleading with the East Hampton Town Board to erect a stop sign at the corner of her property on Bluff Road in Amagansett. (Application denied). And there was violinist Itzhak Perlman, the gentle Itzhak Perlman, speaking rationally and carefully to the East Hampton Town authorities about a tennis court project he had in mind for his lawn. (Project declined.)

And the locals have not been above turning the rich and famous in. Singer Paul Simon was undergoing a routine building inspection when one of the inspectors noted that a gardener for Mr. Simon had apparently pruned and cut back several plants in the wetlands area that were supposed to have been left alone. (Summonses and fines followed.) Millionaire Mort Zuckerman, the man who wanted to build that eighty story skyscraper in Columbus Square in Manhattan, the man who owns and publishes US. News and World Report, virtually pleaded with the East Hampton Town officials that it was all a mistake when some bulldozer operator moved a sand dune on his property from one place to another. (They made him put it back.) And in Sag Harbor, some neighbors called the Sag Harbor officials to complain that Peter Larkin, Broadway set designer Peter Larkin, was parking his classic sixty year old Bugatti automobile in a building on his property that is not now and never was a garage. (Larkin sold the Bugatti.)

What is going on here? In the old days, there was a much more straightforward relationship between the locals and the rich and famous. The locals were proud to have the rich and famous in their midst. The locals did work for them, were happy to have them, and when push came to shove in the center of town, to pretend to ignore them so the rich and famous could alive the bucolic rest they were paying for.

From the opposite perspective, the rich and famous viewed the locals as a kind of friendly, simple folk who, when you really got to know them, were no better and no worse than anyone else and, if you must know, are just like you and me.

My, how this has changed. If it is true that you can't get kicked around unless you let yourself get

HEADLINE NEWS

RHIC Smashes Atoms

"We have just detected the most spectacular subatomic collisions ever witnessed by humankind, and are launching a new area for the study of nuclear matter."

These were the words of Brookhaven National Laboratory's Satoshi Ozaki, Associate Laboratory Directory for RHIC, regarding the Relativistic Heavy Ion Collider (RHIC) project after the first collisions of gold nuclei were indicated by the STAR (Solenoidal Tracker at RHIC) detector on the evening of June 12.

The purpose of the collider is to recreate the conditions of the early universe, the state of matter as it existed immediately after the Big Bang.

"We are crossing into a new frontier of scientific inquiry," said Secretary of Energy Bill Richardson. "Scientists from around the world will use this facility to answer some of the most basic questions about the properties of matter and the evolution of our universe."

RHIC is composed of two separate underground accelerator rings, each 2.4 miles in circumference and consisting of 1,740 superconducting magnets. The magnets guide ions of gold atoms through the rings at close to the speed of light. The ions collide at points at which the rings merge.

In this first stage of RHIC operations, the ion beams are accelerating at four times the energy produced at the renowned CERN accelerator in Europe. Eventually ten times the energy CERN produces will run through RHIC.

Construction of RHIC began in 1991 and was completed in 1999. "This moment represents the culmination of many years of hard work," said Ozaki.

Thomas Ludham, the lab's Deputy Associate Laboratory Director for High Energy Nuclear Physics, said that the research at RHIC will possibly impact on our very notions of cosmology, "such as why the universe has its current structure – and where it might be headed."

$800,000 for Lake Montauk Feasibility Study

State Assemblyman Fred W. Thiele Jr reported that the 2000 New York State Budget adopted by the legislature in May contains $800,000 to conduct a feasibility study to address navigation and coastal protection issues associated with the inlet at Lake Montauk. The state's share of the study is $560,000 and $240,00 is the state's funding to cover the Town of East Hampton's share. The Town will eventually reimburse the state.

The total for the study is $1.6 million.

In 1999, the state provided $200,000 in state funds to augment the federal project to dredge the inlet at Lake Montauk. This permitted the inlet to be dredged to a depth of 16 feet. The dredging was completed in March.

6. Men: Paint it and shut up.

7. Women: THE GARAGE. The men want it back. They need one place on their homestead where they can spit on the floor if they want to. Dedicate a day to this project. If you haven't used the still new stairmaster in two years, you ain't gonna start in this heat. You don't need the stroller anymore, the baby is five. It is a decaying relic of chaos gone by. Let it go. Put anything that isn't beautiful or necessary in the front yard and sell it off. What doesn't sell goes to the Goodies Section, it's the Law of the Island.

8. Women: Go ahead and do it. Buy the latest home decorating magazines. Give yourself a good torture session over how far your home has to go to look like Martha's. Then remember that she has cooks, housekeepers, gardners and a staff to manage her home so she can go on TV and tell you how to manage yours. Still, it would be nice..... okay, now take a deep breath and get over it.

Toss the mags and appreciate your own eclectic home. Just look at that vase your daughter made in art class, you think you could get something like that just anywhere? And that slice of burl clock that hangs in the TV room. You bought that when you were young and stupid and thought laminated burl was beautiful. It hangs there as a testament to how far you have come in taste. And the braided dining room rug that keeps separating. It's a classic. Face it, if your home looked like Martha's, would you let YOUR family live there? Never, they'd LIVE in it and it would be ruined in a week!

9. Men: Make a date with your wife. You too can call the sitter and arrange child care. Take her out. Even a deli sandwich at the beach counts as a date if she doesn't have to cook and watch kids. You want more sex?

There is no greater turn on than seeing a man doing the dishes, picking up towels, running through the sprinkler with the kids. Being a good provider doesn't only mean providing material things. It also means providing time. Nothing softens a superwoman quicker than kindness.

10. Everyone: Wear sunscreen. There is nothing nude under the sun.

only existing neck brace to be signed by both Tony Bennett and Billy Joel. Watch out Ebay.

The Carey clan remains close to this day. Though Carey's primary residence is in Manhattan, only blocks from several of his children, his weekends are almost always spent out on Shelter Island. His daily routine includes a cup of coffee at the local café, a chat with Judge Hannaberry (whose daughter happens to own the café) and 18 holes of golf. Amazingly all 12 of his surviving children and his 15 grandchildren come to the island most weekends as well, where they share the same 20-bedroom house Carey has owned since 1966. His Sunday morning pancake breakfasts and constant surprises are especially popular with the grand kids. He speaks of his children with love, pride and respect, sentiments that are clearly reciprocal.

Carey likes to brag that in addition to his children all being gainfully employed in successful careers, they also each possess some other talents as well. For example, his daughter Maryann, a PR executive, has a flair for decorating, and was given free reign in their island home. The results clearly speak to her talent. Other family members are versed in real estate law, finance and hotel and restaurant management (in fact at one point the family leased the Ram's Head Inn and ran it for a summer or two.) Paul Carey asserts that there is almost no problem they cannot tackle within their own resources. Although most family decisions are made by committee, those with special expertise are deferred to when needed.

These days, Carey himself has his own special project. He recently purchased a 100 acre plus waterfront property, formerly the Ward estate, and plans to subdivide a portion while saving 30 acres for himself and his family. Although time and vandalism have ravaged the main house, he is prepared to go through the painstaking process of recreating much of the unique architectural detail from scratch. "Point Du Hoc" as he plans to name it (French for 'point of height' as well as tribute to his late wife Helen Owen Carey), will be the future of the Carey family. The property will consist of the main house, several smaller houses, restored gardens and most importantly a paddle tennis court.

Carey is bursting with ideas for his new estate, and would most likely need another 80 years to complete all his plans. When I asked him if he was trying to create a sort of "Kennedy compound" for the Carey's he replied, "the Kennedy's can have Hyannis because Hyannis doesn't have anything on Shelter Island." On the recent occasion of his 40th birthday, his son Bryan truly captured his father's ebullient spirit when he toasted him saying, "Now that I'm half my father's age, if I had one quarter of his optimism I would be ahead of the game." Well Bryan, I think we all would. ● during their crisises, easing suffering for the hopelessly ill. He will soon take his first trip to China with forty clowns.

He believes that to be truly healthy, one must first be happy. To that end, he spends an average of four hours interviewing his patients before he attempts to treat them. He wants to "know his patients better than anyone one else does," as he feels that then he can really treat the whole problem, not just the medical one. He has always had an interest in clowning, and found early on that people, especially sick ones, respond so readily to humor. He treats medicine as a service not a business and feels that a physician's job is not always to find a cure, but to ease suffering. "I've seen humor be healthy is ways you can't imagine," he begins, "the health professional's job is to care not cure. We should have great humility for the cure part."

Adams also points out that in many of the places he visits, medicine simply isn't available, therefore, humor and love is the only choice for relief. His vision for a Gesunheit! Hospital is soon to be a reality, thanks to the "sweetness of pop culture". The hospital will have forty patient beds, beds for family and friends, organic gardens, secret passageways and slides that connect one wing to another.

All personnel will receive a minimal salary each year, and they will continue, as always, to offer free medical care to anyone who seeks it.

"Being serious is negative to our health," Adams claims, "and I intend to be an instrument for peace and justice."

Although he works over eighty hours per week, only sleeps two to five hours per night, and exercises one and one-half hours per day, Adams insists he will never burn out. "It's an insult to life, this burn out crap," he reflects, "I love life, that's why I don't burn out." • kicked around, then the new situation has arisen because of a change in the behavior of the rich and famous.

In the City, in the routine of life, in the Big Time, these people snap their fingers and everyone around them jumps. They want limousines, they get limousines. They want a hot lunch brought to them on a silver tray in a board room fifty five stories up, they get hot luncheon on a silver tray fifty five stories up.

In the City there is no real challenge for the rich and famous. What they want they get. And if what they want they can't get, then those who can't get it for them are fired.

Now they come out to the East End. In the old days, these City rules among the rich and famous were no different than they are now to be sure.

But in the old days there was no environmentalism, no fears about failing to save the planet. When the rich and famous come out to the countryside now, they come out with a sense of trepidation. They know, finally, that they must respect the birds flying in formation overhead, they must respect the ducks in the ponds, the deer in the woods and—is it possible? —the charming local folk who are the supposed salt of the earth.

The rich and famous know now, in the 1990's, that the salt of the earth must not be defeated. The rich and famous know that back in the City where they come from they run roughshod over all, and if they knock down this to build that, if they take something red and they make it blue, then they are essentially tearing up the environment, even if it is an environment that was torn up by somebody rich and famous forty years before, and was torn up by somebody rich and famous forty years before that.

But here in the countryside? In among the salt of the earth? If they want something done, they proceed meekly, their cannons muzzled, their shoes off, their volume down, to approach, hat in hand the various farmers, fishermen, clammers and baymen who they believe have been here since the beginning of time. (They haven't.)

And they lose. Gracefully And, somehow, it makes interesting cocktail hour talk at parties from Westhampton Beach to Montauk.

So what do the locals think? Well, like anybody else, they think that if the rich and famous don't want to pull the strings and fight everything all the way up to the Supreme Court, or at least to the next level of appeal, then what the hell. Let's kick a little butt.

Artist Jane Freilicher wants to enlarge her art studio in Water Mill? Application denied. The late Charles Addams wanted to turn a chicken house into a room he can draw his cartoons in? Forget it. Cosmetic tycoon Ron Lauder wants to bring in a nineteenth century church to make a little library on his property? Nope. The steeple's too high.

Hey maybe we can get Paul Newman out here. Or Frank Sinatra. Or Donald Trump, biting his nails and looking at his shoes down in the Town Clerk's office. Didn't somebody say Billionaire Howard Hugehes was still alive? – Dan Rattiner during the cocktail party and a sneak preview of her new movie, I Dreamed of Africa at the Sag Harbor Cinema.

"They had their little girl with them and came over to see all the animals. They are so supportive," she said, gratefully.

Along with the gratification of helping animals, there are also many unpleasant experiences she shared, "Such as the time Jim Hunter and I went on the roof of a three-story house on Dune Road in Westhampton to rescue a seagull. The gull was caught up in kite string that was wrapped around a chimney. It was trying to fly in circles around the chimney, and we had to go out on the roof . . . it was horrible. But, it ended successfully. The gull's leg was cut from the string, but it was eventually rehabilitated."

Then Ginnie shared an unsuccessful mission that occurred two days before in Amagansett. "There was a deer hanging upside down from a fence. Its back leg was stuck on one of the high wires. We had to tranquilize it to bring it down, and we brought the deer to the veterinarian, Dr. Hollander, in East Hampton, who had to put him to sleep. There was too much damage to the leg," she said sadly.

When I asked Ginnie of her opinion on the deer overpopulation problem, she said, "Personally, I'm so against hunting of any kind. It's like stealing, taking something from the wild that doesn't belong to you. They're just going about their business with their own families. When I get a call from someone who complains 'They're eating my bushes,' I just cringe. There's too many people."

When I brought up hunting with bows and arrows, I touched a sensitive area. "There are so many deer that walk around suffering, with arrows in their sides, and it's not even an effective way to control them," she said. "Usually, nature has a way of taking its course; with overpopulation in other areas, there's natural predators, like coyotes. But, we don't have natural predators here. But, I feel the area can hold a certain amount. Ultimately, if there's too many deer, there has to be a reason for it, and it usually has to do with 'people.' Whether they're feeding the deer and they're breeding more because they're healthier, etc."

After the interview with Ginnie, I walked into the garage where I kept "Goldberg," the baby blue jay. When it saw me, it stretched its neck out and bobbed its head up and down with its mouth wide open and cried for food. After it was fed, it curled itself up, with its head tucked into its new soft feathers.

I felt good knowing that the next morning I could take the little bird to someone like Ginnie, who knows a lot more than just coddling wild animals. She offers them more than love – she offers them survival. Soon, she'll have this little bird flying on its own for all of us to enjoy.

If you find yourself in a situation where an animal needs help, all you have to do is pick up the phone and call the Wildlife Hotline #728-WILD, 24 hours a day. The animals thank you. •

Groucho

he? He made so many people laugh!

And his ability to make people laugh continues, Kanfer says, "there are 20 Groucho websites". Just remember," says Kanfer, "Groucho wouldn't join any club that would have him as a member." As people prepared to leave getting on line to receive their autographed copy of GROUCHO, THE LIFE AND TIMES OF JULIUS HENRY MARX every person had an anecdote to share with the author as he signed their books. With a smile and in some instances, a laugh, the audience members left the store with the new book on Groucho tucked under one arm.

Stephan Kanfer has written The 8th Sin, A Summer World, The Last Empire, and Serious Business. He is a former writer and editor at Time and a Literary Lion at the NY Public Library. He has been a writer-in-residence at the City University of New York, the State University of NY at Purchase and Wesleyan University. He lives in New York and Cape Cod.

Groucho has influenced an entire generation of comedians including Woody Allen, Paul Reiser and Richard Belzer. But Groucho consists of far more than jokes. Beneath the one liners, the hilarious antics and the fame was " a life dominated by deep sadness, professional satisfaction, and professional turmoil". •

The Real Patch Adams Speaks at Southampton College

By Janna Cord

Although he never says, "laughter is the best medicine," Patch Adams clearly walks on the humorous side of life. Adams, founder and creator of the Gesundheit! Institute and the subject of the successful 1998 Robin Williams film, was in Southampton this week as the keynote speaker for the 19th International Human Science Research Conference at Southampton College. Famous for his practice of alternative health care delivery, Adams has spent the last thirty-two years caring for and teaching others the methods of easing suffering through love and humor.

Adams, a commanding 6'4", is impossible to overlook. He wears his gray hair waist length, and his attire is strictly clownish at all times. "I didn't dress up for you," he promised.

Born into a military family, Adams lived most of his life overseas on army bases. At sixteen his father was killed in battle and he and his mother returned to the states where Adams immediately joined the civil rights movement. Once back stateside he found it exceedingly difficult to cope with life. He was hospitalized three times when he was seventeen and eighteen, and emerged from the experience a changed man. After his third and final release from a mental institution, Adams made a pledge that from then on he would lead an "intentional existence" and be a "universally happy, celebrant of life." Since then he claims he has lived every day in that spirit.

He attended medical school and immediately became interested in health care delivery. He felt that the bedside manner wasn't stressed enough in school, yet it was probably the most important factor in patient well being. He realized that "giving love to others is an ecstatic experience" and coupled with his natural clowning abilities, he developed his own "bedside manner" that was a cross between unconditional love and humor.

Upon graduation, he opened the Gesundheit! Institute in West Virginia. The pilot project consisted of twenty individuals (three of them medical doctors) and their families, communally living in a six-bedroom house where they offered free medical and psychological care to anyone who sought it. In addition to never charging for their services, in their thirty-two year history, they have never accepted health insurance, never have had a patient sign a waiver or release and have never had malpractice insurance. They operated in that space for twelve years, surviving on their own resources and scant donations. On average, they saw 500-1000 patients per month, and had about five to twenty overnight guests each and every night.

Adams feels that patients are more trusting and open if physicians open themselves and their homes to them. They have treated over 3,000 mentally ill people, yet never have prescribed any psychotropic medication. He has come to realize that these mentally ill are mostly just self involved people who need outward responsibility to take their minds off of their own problems. Many were just happy to find a place where people weren't afraid of them. For example, if a raging psychotic decided to stand in the middle of their kitchen shouting profanities, the Gesundheit! Group would dance around him ranting and raving and maybe even decorate him as he stood there. He likes to call this method the "Monty Python approach," where "like treats like." As was portrayed in the movie, their hands-on approach has caused them some problems. One of their mentally ill patients actually murdered Adam's closest classmate, who in real life was a male but in the Hollywood version was a female love interest. Patch Adams himself has feared for his life on several occasions and has written his family many farewell letters during questionable moments with patients.

After twelve years they decided to close the house, but not the Institute, although most of the original members of the Institute do still live together. For the past eighteen years, the primary mission of the Gesundheit! Institute has been to spread their humor and pain relief around the globe. Adams, along with clowns he has trained, travel to impoverished regions of the world to ease the suffering of the indigent and poor who have no hope of modern medical care. Each year he travels to Russia, where he entertains sick children in orphanages. He spent time in Bosnia and Kosovo

Dan Gets A New Pony

The world loves an original. Often imitated, never duplicated. A few of those can be spotted very far away because of the way they dress. Two of those were at the same event last Saturday, one the awarder, Tom Wolfe, the other the awardee, Dan Rattiner. The occasion was the first P.O.N.Y. award (Pride of New York) given to our man, Dan, at the sprawling estate of Louise and Leonard Riggio in Bridgehampton. Under perfect skies, guests could peer at lawn art or famous people. The proceeds of the event went to the Maryhaven Center of Hope, an organization whose mission is to improve and enrich the lives of people with disabilities.

Happy Almost Birthday

I've often been a guest, but never the guest of honor, until now. Andy Stark threw an almost birthday luncheon party (my birthday is actually in a few weeks) for me last week at her fabulous Waldorf Towers apartment. Friends from all my different lives were there. No I am not doing a Shirley McClaine on you. Radio host Joan Hamburg described me as the Kat with nine lives," meaning my Tv career, Kat's Eye, my company Can Do Women, my tennis, etc. So I decided that in addition to the usual thank you's, I would introduce each other person to the others. A sampling: Sharon Chrust: "We are both sleeping with the Chairman of Umagic, well, that's because there are two Co-Chairs and one is her hubby."

Planned Parenthood

This year's Planned Parenthood Hudson Peconic Benefit was held at the home of Jay Chiat. Anyone who knows Jay knows he is a true one-of-a-kind, from his advertising genius including the legendary "1984" commercial for Apple, to his new Internet company, to his wry comments, so you'd expect his home with famed landscape guru, Edwina Von Gal, to be an original. You wouldn't be disappointed. This converted barn on the ocean, will have you baying with jealousy. The PPHP benefit was catered by Nick and Toni's.

Artists Cooperate at The Island Gallery

By Loraine Page

"It's gorgeous," said Water Mill resident Betty Jo Sheehy as she eyed a print titled "Monarch Butterfly" by Carol Wilson, which was hanging on the wall at The Island Gallery. "I love the colors – they're so vibrant and cheerful."

With these words, Sheehy made the decision to purchase the art, which was one of many pieces she viewed at the May 27 season-opening reception of the cooperative art venture in Shelter Island Heights.

Located at 8 Grand Avenue in a couple of rooms on the ground floor of an 1800s Victorian structure that once served as a boarding house, and most recently was known as "the pink house" until new owners attached cedar shingle siding. The art gallery has been in existence for 32 years, though housed here for only the last seven. Founded by Carol Wilson, the art gallery became a co-op 10 years into her proprietorship when the artist took a job teaching in a Shelter Island School and didn't have time anymore to manage it by herself. A co-op calls for members to share operating costs and to take turns minding the store.

"I've been told that many cooperatives fail because of infighting," said Wilson, who is glad that hasn't been true with The Island Gallery.

Presently, there are 11 exhibits on display. Works include paintings by Blake Laspia, stained glass by Sandy Seff, dried floral designs by Diana Conklin, macrame jewelry by Cynthia Fellows, photography by Eleanor P. Labrozzi, handwoven baskets by Kelli Gross and Debra Ferraro, handmade stoneware pottery by C. C. Bookout, and handcrafted woodwork by Annette and Thaddeus Zygarowicz.

Most of these artists have been with The Island Gallery since 1996. Wilson says business has been brisk the last few years because of a booming economy.

"During the summer we get a lot of daytrippers and people coming over to Shelter Island for the first time," she said. "And we get a lot of people who come for other events like the 10K or to a wedding."

The gallery recently welcomed two new artists who are sharing a space that had become vacant: Alexandra Riccio, who is exhibiting silver and gold Byzantine jewelry, and Anna Jurinich, who is exhibiting acrylic paintings of flowers and painted wooden boxes and paintings of flowers and painted wooden boxes and circles.

"We are so glad to get Alex and Anna," said Wilson. "We had interviewed a lot of artists and just stopped because we weren't finding anyone suitable. In choosing artists, we look for a combination of excellent work and compatibility with the rest of the artists' work — not to mention a flexible schedule so they can put their hours in.

"Basically, we just wait for the right people. We don't want an Andy Warhol type. We want someone who is down to earth like Shelter Island is."

Wilson was pleased that two pieces of Jurinich's work sold within the first hour of the reception. "It's rare to find someone with her technical ability," she said.

Jurinich describes herself as a serious painter whose subjects sometimes include death. At The Island Gallery she shows the lighter side of her imagination, such as the wooden box upon which she painted a beach umbrella scene — including a copy of Dan's Papers sticking out from a beach bag.

Wilson herself is a painter with a following. "The year-round and seasonal residents of Shelter Island are definitely my main market," she said. "Shelter Island is a small enough place that you really become visible. You don't get lost."

Wilson calls herself an "on-location" painter, which means that clients commission her to paint their portraits, pets, houses, and beaches. Many of her paintings, such as "Monarch Butterfly," are done in "gouache," which means opaque watercolor.

Wilson's artwork and that of her fellow members can be seen at The Island Gallery every day from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., except for Saturdays when the store remains open until 9.

"It looks like they all left with a full tummy."

So said Past-President Wini Titterton of Aquebogue when asked what she thought of this year's Women's Club of Riverhead's Annual Scholarship Luncheon and Fashion Show.

About 160 members of the 85-year-old chapter of a national federation of women's clubs were feted Friday, May 19 from noon until 3 p.m. in the chandeliered ballroom of Aquebogue's The Vineyard Caterers, which is surrounded by acres of grapevines.

The Vineyard Manager John Horvath said the ladies were served fanned fruit, a garden salad, and for the main entree they were offered a choice of Prime Rib, Salmon with Dill Sauce, or Pasta Primavera. Dessert was coffee and ice cream sundaes.

Scholarship recipients were announced, and then over 70 raffle prizes ranging from bottles of wine to flats of flowering plants were distributed. The prizes came from many establishments on the North Fork, including Tanger Outlets, Modern Snack Bar, The Riverhead Lemon Tree, and Acard Jewelers.

Afterward, the ladies settled back to enjoy a fashion show. Sporting garments provided by Renees Women's Wear located on Main Road in Mattituck were club members Betsy Crump, Caryl Granttham, Laura LaSita, Shirley Simon, Juana Flores, Mary Kenter, Doris Scudder, and Katherine Zutt. The models showed off their ensembles, which ranged from casual to dressy, on the wooden dance floor in the center of the room.

The members of the Riverhead Women's Club live on the North Fork, from Southhold to Shoreham. They meet at the Community Center in Jamesport on the third Friday of every month, and have been doing so for many years.

The purpose of the club is philanthropy. According to Mrs. Titterton, each year it presents scholarships to high school seniors "to assist them in various fields of endeavor."

-This year, the $500 winners included: Kevin R. Tuthill of Mattituck High School for Education; Shannon McCarthy of Shoreham-Wading River High School for Health/Medical; and Kathleen Brisotti of Mattituck High School for Music. The $100 winners included: Diana M. Joseph of Southold High School for Education; Karyn Altman of Hampton Bays High School for Health/Medical; and Margaret Flood of Riverhead High School for Music. Both of the music scholarship recipients, Miss Brisotti and Miss Flood, performed classical pieces for the ladies during the luncheon. Mrs. Titterton said the Women's Club of Riverhead also contributes to the Riverhead Free Library and to the Suffolk County Historical Society. Their main fundraisers are the May luncheon and a brunch that is held in October.

Star Cars

In the Hamptons, Memorial Weekend summons the parade of expensive, exotic cars: Bentleys, Porsches, Ferraris and Mercedes. Rolling into the Hamptons are also the armies of giant SUV's that block the horizon: station wagons that have bulked up on steroids.

What do the famous residents of the Hamptons tool around in, or better yet, what do I imagine they should be driving?

Knowing that Jerry Seinfeld has a fleet of Porsches, I've always wondered why one of the funniest men on the planet collects what I consider to be one of the most serious cars in the world. The Germans are a very somber people, especially when it comes to machinery. I had occasion to meet the late Dr. Ferry Porsche, and yes, the guy was an engineering genius, but the man couldn't tell a joke. For Seinfeld to be collecting Porsches is as incongruous as Christopher Walken collecting circus clown cars.

Jerry should collect cars that make you smile. How about some diminutive English mini Coopers, or any model of the funky French-built Citroen? In the '60's the wonderful Italian car company Fiat, the parent company of both Ferrari and Alfa Romeo, produced a funny little car that would be perfect for Jerry Seinfeld called the Fiat Jolly.

Kim Bassinger and Alec Baldwin, a beautiful and talented couple who try to avoid the prying eyes of the public, relish their private lives. The perfect car for those two would be a police cruiser, festooned with antennas and flashing lights. No one would notice them in the car because the last thing one does is stare at a police car, or even worse, make eye contact with a state trooper. They would be able to drive and park the thing anywhere, and put the pedal to the metal with impunity.

Roy Scheider's '59 Cadillac

Leonardo DeCaprio. There was an interesting car made in West Germany from 1961 to 1968 called the Amphicar. A unique vehicle, it was a car and boat combined that could be driven right from the highway into the water where it would float and cruise. Only eight hundred were sold because the big problem with the hybrid was that on land it handled like a boat, and in water had all the capabilities of a car. We all know which name should appear on the transom,er,trunk of DeCaprio's. The Amphicar, made of metal, was prone to rust, so a surviving model could probably be called Submarinecar. But Leonardo could have a lot of fun with this vehicle, and if it were to sink, the story could be made into another blockbuster film.

Ralph Lauren has one of the finest car collections in the world. His taste in cars is as finely honed as his taste in clothes so I'm at a loss as to tell this guy what to drive. Ralph, drive whatever you want. Though, once in a while, take a spin in a Geo Metro or a Hundui Sonata just to relate to the less fortunate.

Donna Karen. Your taste equals Ralph's. Don't even buy a car. Just borrow one from Ralph. You know, like "Pass the Grey Poupon."

Sean "Puffy" Combs is a music impressario of the first magnitude, and there ain't nothing low key about this guy. He and his entourage need a really big vehicle, bigger than a Ford Expedition, with more presence than a Hummer. Puffy should own a Prevost Motorhome. They are forty feet long, and run about $700,000 fully loaded. From personal experience, I can tell you this is the best way to travel. Bareboned, you see them all over as the Hampton Jitney.

Susan Lucci. I see her quite often at the local fresh produce stand in Westhampton. She's delicate, feminine and lovely. If cars were woman, and to many people they are, Susan Lucci would be a Miata.

The famous "Jaws" star Roy Scheider should drive nothing less than a white '59 Caddy. Even though GM designed the car to look like a fighter plane with its magnificent three foot high tail fins, now , forty-one years later, jet planes are old news. But this bizarre looking Cadillac bears an amazing resemblance to a big fish that we all know and fear.

This list has just touched the tip of the iceberg (sorry, Leo) because there are so many celebrities summering in the Hamptons now. More later.

Scenes From a Spoke Man (Observations From a 10-Speed)

By Steven G. Corwin

Ever since my middle brother Glenn gave me a shove on my red Schwinn with training wheels, I have been a devoted bicyclist. Growing up, I rode back and forth to school every day, exercised my golden retriever running behind to keep up, courted girl friends and even went to the Senior Prom on a bicycle. Ultimately, the goal of any young American bicycle fanatic, those who need to ride every day, in the same way they require oxygen, is to ride cross country, coast to coast. This I did at the age of eighteen, the summer of 1972, the year of Easy Rider. I went with one of my best school buddies, Chip. We kept a northern route to beat the summer heat riding from Old Greenwich, Connecticut to New York State through Niagara Falls, part of Ontario into Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota, Wyoming, Idaho and hitting the Pacific in Florence, Oregon. The trip took 45 days of riding. We averaged 85 miles a day.

What I discovered on that trip was to enjoy the journey, as much as appreciating the destination. On a bicycle you get to see every detail–the changes in landscape, the formations of clouds, sky conditions, birds in flight, wildlife, road kill, the vernacular architecture, the strip malls, billboards, the basic everyday life of the planet. You see it all.

The East End is ideal for bicycle touring. Roads cutting through farm fields of potatoes, corn and rye run parallel to the ocean. The flatness that seems to go on forever is not dissimilar to roads that captivated me in the heartlands of Wisconsin, Minnesota and South Dakota. During the course of a summer you can watch the progress of the corn grow until you're riding through a corn-sided tunnel, catching glimpses of incredibly colored pheasants darting in and among the stately stalks.

Out here a cyclist also witnesses the progression of construction–the evolution of Ira Rennert's Peaceable Kingdom, the popping up of Post Modern "McMansion," where it you look closely you will see the ruby slippers sticking out from where the house k-o'd the witch when it landed on the farm field. You will see the scraping and repainting of traditional beach cottages, the relocation of a barn, the digging for a pool.

What strikes me as truly surprising is the relatively small amount of people partaking in the East End bicycle experience. It seems that the typical summer person drives out and around in Sport Utility Vehicles named "Explorer", "Sierra", "Discoverer", "Tahoe", "Yukon"' or "Aventura". But instead of discovering, exploring or adventuring they do not leave these cars. They zoom around, way too fast, cell phone in hand. Who can even see the roses, much less smell them from behind those tinted black windows.

One learns where the expression "amber waves of grain" originates. The purpose of this column is to observe life out here from the perspective of a bicycle ride. Often the destination for me will be a bench in front of the Sagg Store in Sagaponack (I ride to eat, and I eat everything along the way). From this bench I witness the S.U.V.'s continually pulling in and out. I would like to witness this intense crossroads from outer space. It reminds me of 57th and Fifth, or the bumper cars at Coney Island. Seen from this distant galaxy would prove there is unintelligent life in the Universe. From this bench I see the morning construction crews getting caffinated and their bacon and eggs on kaiser rolls, I see mothers directing their children away from Hostess cupcakes and on to more sensible breakfasts. I see flatbeds of huge about-to-be-transplanted cherry blossom trees, I see the V formation of overhead flying geese setting a course like they just took off from LaGuardia. The longer I sit, the more I realize that most people do not stay anywhere any more. They just come and go in their cars, and make these cars simulated environments.

On a bicycle your eyes become the camera in an ever unfolding, always changing major motion picture. In the columns to come, scenes will unfold, characters will take their mark. The location is here, ready, waiting. I look forward to the rides.

Summer Cyber-Shopping Sites

By Rachel Sokol

Dot.COM, the new weekly addition to Dan's Papers, features websites for those in need of basic information rather than massive e-mails jokes. I'm an online-addict. With endless information at our fingertips (and our phonelines tied up from excessive, "logging on,") we have drastically cut down my telephone and research time with our new friends World Wide and Web.

Nowadays, quick information is what we crave to save time in our busy lives, so we turn to the internet. Web-browsing isn't as easy as it may appear, but it certainly is beneficial. Today, anyone can create a detailed website which caters to themselves, their interests or their business.

Since anyone can put up a website, everyone can be published and made public. Personalized websites are the easiest way to conduct worldwide business and show yourself off, hassle-free.

Today's business world stresses, such as constant phone calls, faxes and fact checking the old fashioned way, are diminished with the power of the information superhighway.

A company website is no longer a big deal anymore, since they are the latest rage and will continue to be. Of course, not everything find in cyberworld is completely legitimate—many sites do not have parental controls, eliminating cyber censorship.

Through personalized websites, freedom of speech is taken to a whole new level, which can be exciting, yet, controversial. And although it is convenient and easy to shop online, you are taking a risk when punching your credit card info into the cyberwaves.

Although most sites provide warnings and card-security guarantees, every day there are new revelations about personal information being attained online. Before you order anything online, check out the customer return-policy on the site.

Via computer waves, millions of eager entrepreneurs are vying for your attention through your computer. Web surfing is just as exciting as a trip to the stores. And it's definitely working, for some of these sights just lure you in because of their conveniences. Websites are like infomercials: they are full of guarantees and make you think you couldn't survive without their fabulous offers. The web can be an amazing source of information and shopping-if used correctly and sparingly, of course. This summer, don't forget your Hamptons essentials: swimsuit, sunblock, rollerblades and laptop.

To make your cyber-shopping a little easier, visit some of the sites below—in your pajamas.

For those who are too dependent on the internet to do their own shopping, there is Kozmo.com (www.kozmo.com), available in certain cities (such as NYC, Chicago and Boston) in which movies, including current releases, and snacks are delivered right to your door in under an hour. After you register your preferred munchies, music or videos through the computer, a Kozmo messenger brings it directly to your door like a dog retrieving a ball. But the site stops taking orders around 2 a.m. A fun sight, but how badly do you need a pint of Ben and Jerry's shipped to you within the hour?

If you are looking for more diverse music, ARTIST Direct (www.artistdirect.com) has updated music news, concert information, and a broad search of music to purchase, sorted by artist, movie, title or genre for an easy, direct search.

If your prefer listening to showtunes, soundtracks from today's Broadway productions, as well as other theatre memorabilia, are available at ThreatreMania.com. This site also provides information on productions in Chicago, Boston, London and Canada and you can purchase tickets for a specific date and time through the site. Petopia.com, a division of the Petco chain stores, sells dogs, cats and even reptiles paraphernalia. You can even purchase animal-orientated bottled water and paw protector mittens, as well as food. Petopia is also a crowded website, full of links to advice on traveling with a pet and their special dietary and veterinary needs.

And speaking of traveling with a pet, discounted airline tickets can be purchased through lowestfare.com, but you must be very specific with your flight preferences as well as be registered with the site. They provide cruise information and prices as well as national flights. Expedia.com is another ticket-travel website, which even includes ground transportation information, for those not afraid to fly. It is best to register your e-mail/contact information with these travel sites in order to obtain all the benefits they offer customers.

Get lost with a novel this summer at Barnes and Noble. For shopping of books, music, posters and magazines, Barnes and Noble (www.bn.com) provides an in-depth search by title, keyword, author or genre, for new and old reading material. It's the perfect site to browse for father's day, promising hasty delivery.

Shopping for the kiddies? Try Etoys.com. You can shop by the age of the children or use the browser to help you pinpoint exactly what toy suits best. The site also provide online shopping for software, DVDs, Music, Video Games and Books—all age appropriate.

Sometimes your closest friends are the hardest to shop for, but giftcertificates.com provides you with a search for stores in your town which you may purchase a gift certificate for and have it mailed to a friend. Searches are done by region and movie theatre gift-certificates are available through the site as well.

Searches are also organized alphabetically by store, such as Bloomingdales or Crate and Barrel. But since this site is packed with gift certificate information, it may run a little slow at times.

Send off a catchy birthday card, flowers or chocolate with, which allows you to order cards and stationery for all occasions. You can even look at the cards over the computer to choose which ones you prefer. Sure beats standing in front of racks of cards for what seems like hours. And...No aching feet to soak.

Shop'til You Drop......With Maria Tennariello

Rain, rain, go away! Although shopping is a pleasure for me in any kind of weather, enough is enough. With my umberella ready, and my rain totes on, I was ready, willing and almost able to shop. So, let's go shopping.

Starting out in Sag Harbor, I thought I would pop in on Latham House for a look at what's new. Father's Day gift giving is indeed easy here, there is a nice selection of men's and ladies fine sportswear and accessories.

You really haven't seen anything yet until you visit the Style Bar. Sitting nicely on Bay Street in Sag Harbor, the day spa salon menu here goes on and on. I thought of a special Father's Day gift certificate for my sons, just because they both deserve a treat on their special day. "Package of Style" is a perfect gift for that special man in your life, allowing him to experience the style of well being and comfort. This package includes a men's facial (one hour), scalp treatment (thirty minutes), manicure and a full body massage (one hour). Hey, it's not a woman's world any more. Call for information at 725-6730.

Southampton's Rose Jewelers on Main Sreet has a wonderful selection of cufflinks that can be engraved with that favorite guy in your life in mind.

Nearby at Dansk Factory Ourtlet , , you will save an extra 15% to 50% mystery discount off your entire purchase on selected merchandise.

Just a reminder, if you are in Southampton this weekend, don't forget to stop by 48 Main Street where Saks Fifth Avneue has opened a separate "Women's Shoe Store" and "Prada Handbag Shop" adjacent to their men's store in Southampton.

If you would really like to do something different for Father's Day, try getting your favorite guy a membership at Sportime of the Hamptons and save $50 or $200. Located on Route 104 in Quogue, Sportime is "The Hampton's largest most complete fitness and multi-sport facility that even includes tanning. There is indoor and outddor tennis, personal training, aerobic and kick boxing classes, boxing, karate, spinning, racquetball, indoor full court basketball, pool, saunas and.... A day camp that includes transportation and lunch. I'm there!

Why not think of having Dad's favorite chair re-upholstered. And...get the re-upholstering on sale to boot. At Joseph's Interior Decorators on County Road 39 in Southampton, there is an extensive selection of fabric samples for you to choose from, in a full service shop with all the work done on the premises... and the good part, now the fabrics are reduced 40% to 60% off the original price. Also located in Eastport, give them a call at 283-5890.

Well, here's a great gift for mom, dad, and friends. Cat, a friend of mine has introduced me to her very own fully certified personal trainer, with impeccable credentials, (US, England, Sports Corner, etc.) Sarah Dobbs-Kochis. Sarah is located in Southampton and makes house calls. Can't get better service than that. Cat has been working very hard and dilligently to get those few unwanted winter pounds off, and I might say, she looks great! Call Sarah at 516-480-3349.

Pier One Imports is having a heck of a sale going on right now. All wicker seating is reduced 35% and be sure to take advantage of some great outdoor accessories like citronella-scented candles on sale from $4 to $16, that's a 20% savings. I especially loved the candl holder lanterns that lend themselves to flights of fancy on sale for $19, regularly $30. The mix and or match, looks like glass, acrylic collectiondoes it for me. Lovwe the purple color dinnerware that looks got on your patio table.

They do come in a rainbow of colors. So go get them, while the selection is still there. How about that picnic basket gift set for that special person in your life? For only $22, you can get the set for two or go for broke, get service for four for $30. Love that Pier One Imports!

The Bridgehampton Commons has been buzzing with shoppers all year, this weekend was crazy. I stopped at T.J. Maxx, where I usually find my daughter Michele shopping, shopping, shopping. The apple does not fall far from the tree. I found some real creative gifts for my dad and my two sons and put together a collection that reflect their interests. How about that golfer on your gift list? Check out the golf shirts and golf-themed picture frame for his desk. Or put together the ultimate workout bag. Fill a gym bag with gym socks, a water bottle, T-Shirt, towel, etc. so he'll be all set to sweat. Just do it! T.J. Maxx also sells biking shirts, shorts, tire pumps, locks and lots of fun bike accessories to complete the package. Music lover? Travel CD cases now come in a variety of styles including leather, neoprene, lacquered steel, wood with fun plastic colors. The gardener? Find a varietyof items for the garden including pots, stones, statues, planters and more. Grill freak? Put together a basket that includes gourmet BBQ sauces, tools, wood chips and a fun apron. He'll be all set to hit the patio in style. Computer nerd? How about some new software, or a comfy gel mouse mat and wrist rest? Those are only a few of the good ideas at T.J. Maxx.

Do you know what clothing store I love? It's Eileen Fisher on Newtown Lane in East Hampton. Her clothing is a "comfort zone" for me, the kind of comfort that lets you move freely and gracefully, with confidence and ease. I especially love the layered look and it does hide those few extra pounds. So when you're strolling downtown East Hampton, stop in at Eileen Fisher, you'll love what you see.

I would like to take this opportunity to wish all you dad's out there a wonderful Father's Day and a real special one to my sons, Joe and Randy and to my dad, Paul for always being there for me.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Father's Day shopping.

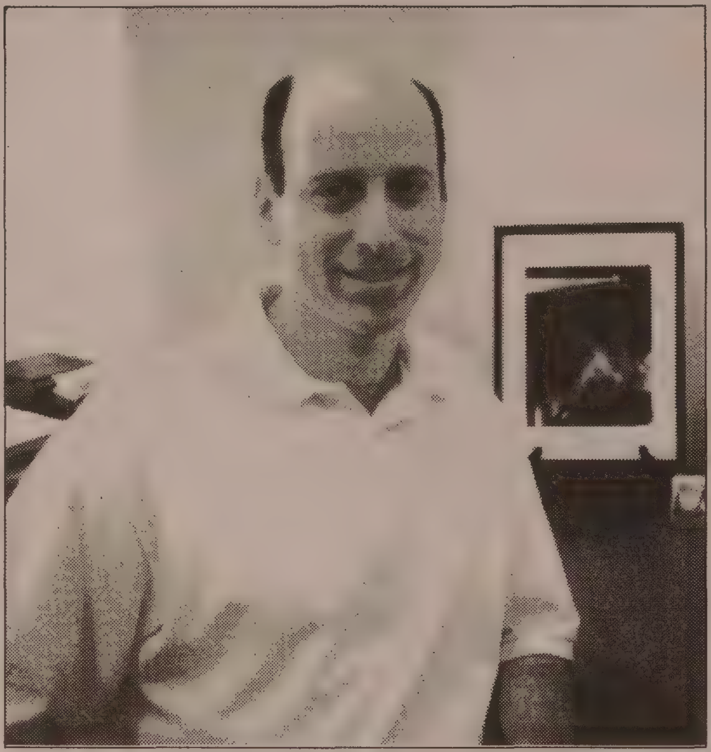
Not Your Father's Men's Magazine

By Christopher Moore



Don,t look for scantily clad, super-thin young women on the cover of the brand-new Dads magazine. In its debut issue this month, the magazine has a cover featuring Baltimore Oriole great Cal Ripken Jr. Eric Garland, 43, the magazine's editor and the managing partner of a new, multimedia company called Dadsmedia LLC, notes how the rise of Maxim magazine, with its sexy covers and attention to the fast life, has even an old title like Esquire striving to get sluttier and sillier. The covers with the half-naked women, more like Playboy than the Esquire of old, are all about targeting twenty somethings.

"They can have them," Garland said last week.

Dads, which officially launches on Father's day, will publish four issues this year and six next year. Targetting men twenty-five to fifty-four who have children under 18, the men behind the magazine hope for 500,000 readers by the fourth year.

"I think we'll get there sooner," said Garland, an Upper East Sider.

Perched next to a round table with a large television set and a slew of magazines nearby, Garland spoke enthusiastically in his new East 32nd Street office about launching an independent, "cross-platform media company." The magazine already has 10 employees and expects to grow soon to a staff of twenty full-timers.

Dads Media LLC is a group effort, with Garland teaming with two former EMAP Pederson, Inc. magazines professionals: Walter Rosenthal, the chief operating officer, and Seth Kean, the executive vice-president. The three will start a web site this week (edads.com), with plans for future forays into television and radio syndication.

In a statement released to the press, Kean said, "Traditional magazine companies have either ignored the thirty-eight million fathers in the U.S. or have erroneously assumed that these needs have been satisfied by parenting and/or women's service publications. We have created a magazine that is timely, appropriate and needed for men today."Citing a profound change in culture and society about how men view parenting, Garland said, "This is not my father's magazine. It couldn't have been even ten years ago."

The inaugural issue includes: a serious story called "Breaking the Boy Code," about how dads connect with sons; "A Survival Guide to Disney World"; and departments devoted to technology, cars, cooking, education, travel and finance. Even as he explained how men today "want to be more connected and more engaged with out families," Garland has a family of his own that is growing.

Wife Ellen is expecting their second child at the end of July. Son Andrew is two and a half. Ellen's advice about the magazine project was simple. "She said: "Do it. She loves the idea," Garland recalled. He emphasized how he feels a responsibility to lead by example and make fatherhood a public priority. More and more men care about that, according to a study released by the Radcliffe Public Policy Center.

The national survey of 1,008 people showed eighty-two percent of men ages twenty-one to thirty-nine put family time at the top of their list, which nearly matched the eighty-five percent of women in those age groups. The same survey showed seventy-one percent of men in that age group saying they would give up some of their pay for more time with their families.

Garland hopes his magazine will examine the erosion between home and work life – and help men to navigate this new world. The change comes "because of email and because of this supposedly new era of empowerment. The irony or the down side is that we have less time for a family and social life."

In future issues, Garland is planning to include accounts of corporate life and a list of the most dad-friendly corporations. "We want to get in the trenches and really report on those pressures on men these days," he said.

Still, he stressed, "I want to make it fun and lively." That's why, in the debut issue, the review "for kids" page is followed by a separate section reviewing "for Dad."

"We're a men's magazine for men who happen to be dads. I want readers to feel: ŒHey, there's stuff for me in here."

Yes, the editor acknowledged, men still care about ambition, money and success. But there's a catch.

"Even if you have those things, it's a hollow victory if you are not grounded in your family."

During the summertime, he stays grounded partly by spending most weekends in the Hamptons, at a house in Remsenburg. "It's beautiful, quiet, entirely residential," Garland reported. "We're either in the backyard around the pool or sometimes out and around Westhampton." He said he likes "the twenty degree cooler temperature we find closer to the water."

Given the nature of family life, "it's not like we're out hitting the restaurant and bar scene," but Garland had kind words for the Tierra Mar restaurant in Westhampton Beach. And there's at least one more pleasure of those Hamptons weekends: "I try to get in a few rounds of golf at Hampton Hills."

When it comes to his work life, Garland brings twenty years of experience as an editor to his latest endeavor. A former senior editor of Money magazine, the Johns Hopkins English major had experience launching a business magazine in Baltimore back in 1986. He came to New York in 1991 and was the executive editor for the launch of Brill's Content. The Dads business officially kicked off last November.As a child growing up near "the country's largest repository of toxic radioactive waste," Garland was more interested in science. In college, though, he found a passion for words. When it comes to journalism, he likes "the mix of ideas, writing, the immediacy."

"This is not meant to be a New York-centric or New York-only or L.A. – only publication," he said. The magazine will be distributed at Barnes & Noble, Borders, B. Dalton, 1,000 airport locations and newsstands around America.

"If I had a business model, honestly, it's Martha Stewart," Garland said, praising the one-woman media machine for knowing the value of being independent. At an independent shop, he said, "You rise and fall with your own magazine and your core staff."

Even in a technological age, he had kind words for print. "Magazines are still great financial models if you have a well-defined audience," he said.

Also needed: a broad ad base and "you,ve got to put out a good goddamn magazine." – Chistopher Moore

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

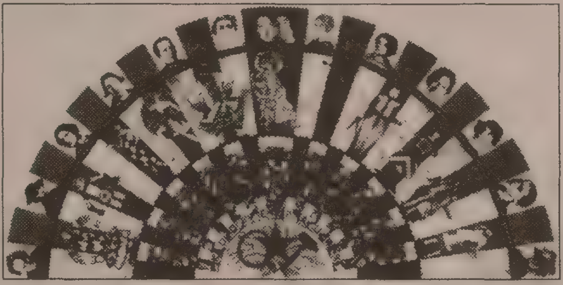
MIRIAM SCHAPIRO/ BALCOMB GREENE AT ARLENE BUJESE

Miriam Schapiro is often easy on viewers when ascribing meaning to her work. Some titles are dead giveaways— for example, "Bound and Free" features a doll enveloped by a geometric pattern of squares. Conversely, Ms. Schapiro isn't particularly easy on herself: she's too busy trying to understand the meaning of her own life.

Either way you look at it, Ms. Schapiro has guts. She's not afraid to let people see that quest for meaning. While such a search coincided with the feminist movement, one has the feeling that Ms. Schapiro's journey is hers and hers alone.

That is not to infer that her quest cannot be shared; some images are concrete and universal dealing with the mundane and routine of woman's work, like her "Autobiography" where simple objects (i.e. scissors) are the rule. Yet concrete imagery often gives way to abstract ones, to Ms. Schapiro's consistent configurations of fragmentation and compartmentalism.

Ms. Schapiro's fragmented "form" mirrors her "content" or theme— her own life being organized around diverse, separate roles (mother, wife, artist) that are difficult to integrate- that are, in fact, fragmented like her visual patterns. One is reminded of other art forms that are characterized by these traits: TV soap operas, for example, where scenes (the form) are short and never completed, thus representing the scattered lives and work of female viewers.



Miriam Schapiro's "Mother Russia."

Even so, there is often a "core" configuration that speaks to the essence of Ms. Schapiro's work: while her shapes ("Asian Miracle" and "Caribbean Folly") cut through the space, there is a semi-circle of color which is whole and integrated. Could this be Ms. Schapiro's spirit, soul, or some other source of her strength?

Other intriguing contradictions appear, one being the mass- consumed concrete doll image in "Autobiography" versus the high tech, glamorous model image in "Out of Her Father's House." — all going to prove that identity quests are froth with opposition. In Ms. Schapiro's work, such contradictions are an art form in itself.

If Ms. Schapiro is exploring an interior landscape, Balcomb Greene is certainly examining an exterior one. Even so, both concepts are really part of the same reality— or opposite sides of the coin, to use a cliche. Mr. Greene's seascapes are just as contradictory as Ms. Schapiro's imagery, his shapes (rocks, waves) flowing one into the other and also standing apart from each other. Direction plays a part in this oppositon as well with the arresting juxtaposition of verticals and horizontals. This opposing exterior reality becomes a quest as well.

The current show will be at East Hampton's Arlene Bujese Gallery until June 22.

HONORING THE ARTIST: DANIEL POLLERA

HONORING THE ARTIST, JUNE 16, DANIEL POLLERA

We can tell that artist Daniel Pollera feels a special kind of pride when he is asked about the cover painting on this week's Dan's Papers. "To be honest," he responds without arrogance, "this is the finest piece I've done, at least according to my publisher."

Mr. Pollera goes on to explain about the work he calls very "special". "I knew it was special when I was doing it, but I wondered what the publisher of my prints would think. He is very discriminate and tough. I was surprised when he said, ' Wow, Dan, this is a good piece.'"

We are curious about the process of creating something that an artist knows is different from the other work he has done previously. At what point did Mr. Pollera feel he had a "winner?" "Billy Joel said it best," Mr. Pollera answers. " He said the beginning of creating something was pure inspiration and powerful. Once you get into it, it becomes torture. I agree. The piece was playing with me once I got into it. It made me nuts. Once I completed it, it took me a week to digest it. It was soon after I finished the painting that it had a debut at the Art Expo in New York."

EAST HAMPTON

While Mr. Pollera is known for his images of houses with unique porches, we are still curious about what inspired him about this particular home. "It just caught my eye as I was wandering around Western Long Island," Mr. Pollera responds with great enthusiasm. "I saw this house with a gorgeous porch although it was not facing the water, I caught a sliver of sparkling water between two buildings. That set off the magic for me. That image became part of me; it added another level for me."

Mr. Pollera proceeded to get a shot of the water and with his X-acto blade, cut out all the background in the photograph. Using other techniques, he added the house, a window and new colors. While the finished piece is not an exact replica of what he saw, Mr. Pollera feels that his title, "Serenity," gives the setting a special mood and meaning.

"The title is clear and crisp to go along with what I was feeling," Mr. Pollera explains. "It's a strong mood; the painting (and seeing the actual sliver of water) just pulled the feeling out of me."

Mr. Pollera has another reason why "Serenity" is so special: "I'm pleased because I didn't pay attention this time to whether the work would sell. This time I pleased myself."

Mr. Pollera is also involved with a new business venture that will perhaps please him as well. He's starting a company, Coastal Publications, that will publish limited editions. This way, Mr. Pollera says, he will have to participate in the business end of things, thus having more control.

While searching for the perfect house to paint (which takes him all over the place), he still has time for his wife who helps with business "details," a son with whom he goes fishing and a 15-year-old daughter. It's apparent that Mr. Pollera is devoted to his family, yet we have the feeling that his search for certain kinds of houses is never far from his mind and eye–places that offer comfort, protection, and "Serenity."

HAMPTONS NIGHTLIFE WITH CHRISTINE CARROLL

Shout out of the week to: My Daddy, Happy Fathers' Day.

I hope you all enjoyed this past weekend, I certainly did. We went to the Beach Bar on Friday and then headed over to Casey's. Both were packed. Sugar was playing at the Beach Bar, and from the looks of the dance floor people were happy with their performance. I also saw them again on Saturday at Neptunes, which was so crowded that all I wanted to do was shower as soon as possible. Speaking of Neptunes, they are going to start opening Thursday nights starting June 29 serving 5 cent drafts till 1 a.m. Some other new things happening are Jazz weekends at Janeen's starting July 1, the A Lounge opened last weekend down the road from Jet East and a new place opening in Sag Harbor called the Sag Harbor Grill. Also, the Farmhouse is serving watermelon martini's and pizza on Thursdays. Be sure to check it all out,

Take Five 2000

with Jan Silver

There is a wide range of entertainment this week: NYU film studies professor Richard Brown screens a new film at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Friday, the Perlman/Nikkanen/Bailey classical music trio plays there on Saturday, the Parrish Art Museum's "Landscape Pleasures" symposium is Saturday and Sunday, the Southampton Players present Neil Simon's comedy Fools, the once-a-year "Songs for a Summer Night" concert is in East Hampton on Saturday as are international dance stars in a separate program. And there's more—Guild Hall opens a special exhibition on Saturday, "American Impressionism: Treasures from the Smithsonian American Art Museum;" an original spoof of Hamlet debuts in Sag Harbor on Sunday, Pianofest concerts begin on Monday and Bay Street Theatre's second summer production opens next Wednesday.

East End gardens are in full bloom so, in addition to the gardens on view at Landscape Pleasures, the Animal Rescue Fund has a benefit garden tour on Saturday as does the national Garden Conservancy. The Family Service League holds its "Taste of the Hamptons" in the unique Madoo Conservancy gardens early Saturday evening, and the Group for the South Fork's big dinner dance and auction is at Villa Maria in Water Mill also on Saturday evening.

There are good musicians at the clubs and interesting writers talking about their work, so read on for details:

THEATER

The Southampton Players, a troupe of talented Southampton College students and community actors, present Neil Simon's comedy Fools on Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Avram Theater at the college. Fools is a comic fable about a Russian village enslaved by an ancient curse—everyone in the village is an idiot—and a stranger has 24 hours to break the curse. Tickets ($8-$12) are available at the door.

Spindletop Productions, a local professional group, is debuting Hamlet II, a spoof of Shakespeare's melancholy Dane. The playwright turning Hamlet into a comedy is Sam Bobrick. Jonathan Peters is producing, directing and portraying Gildenstern and the Grave Digger. Hamlet II performances are dinner and theater this Sunday and Monday evening at Sugar Reef Restaurant, 21 West Water Street, Sag Harbor. Dinner is served at 7 p.m. and the play begins at 8 p.m.; the tab for both is $39.95. Reservations are recommended; call (631) 725-0358. The dinner/theater program runs through July 10.

Bay Street Theatre's second summer presentation is a new version of Henrik Ibsen's Hedda Gabler written by accomplished contemporary playwright Jon Robin Baitz. This is a co-production with the Williamstown Theatre Festival. Preview performances begin next Wednesday, June 21, with opening night on Saturday, June 24. To reserve tickets, call the box office at (631) 725-9500 (open daily 11 a.m. until 6 p.m.).

DANCE

An evening of professional dance, "Pure Motion," featuring members of American Ballet Theater, Dance Theater of Harlem, the Paul Taylor Dance Company, Monte/Brown troupe, MOMIX and American Ballroom Theatre goes on at East Hampton High School this Saturday at 8 p.m. It is a benefit for Community Research Initiative on AIDS (CRIA) and Dancers Responding to AIDS (DRA). There is a reception before the performance. Tickets ($35-$500) are available by calling (212) 840-0770 or at the website www.bcefa.org.

FILM

NYU film studies professor Richard Brown returns to the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center with three evenings of new films and discussions with the director and/or actors involved in each. This year's series is Friday, June 16 and June 30 at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, July 16, at 7 p.m. Tickers are $30 each evening or $75 for the series; call WHBPAC at (631) 288-1500.

MUSIC

"Songs for a Summer Night," a concert of opera, musical theater and operetta selections performed by international opera stars, can be heard on Saturday, 8 p.m., in St. Luke's Church, East Hampton. This special evening, organized by James de Blasis, is a benefit for East End Hospice. Tickets still available as of this writing are $25 and $100. There is a reception to meet the artists following the performance. Call (631) 324-2169.

The young, talented Perlman/Nikkanen/Bailey Trio (piano, violin, cello) will play the music of Brahms and Beethoven on Saturday, 8:30 p.m., at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center (631-288-1500). The pianist is Navah Perlman, one of Itzhak and Toby Perlman's gifted offspring.

Pianofest, the program for up-and-coming concert pianists, begins its weekly Monday recitals at Guild Hall, East Hampton, at 4 p.m. Pianofest director Paul Schenly speaks about the music to be played each week. Tickets are available at the door ($8).

Music at the clubs: Sorry I missed the melodious, acoustic L.I. band The Scoldees at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse this past week (their first CD My Pathetic Life is tuneful and hardly sorrowful) but Dave Mason will be at the Talkhouse on Friday, Freedy Johnson on Saturday and Bluestime with Magic Dick and J. Geils on Sunday (call 631-267-3117 for tickets). More good music for adults: swing with Stefanie Cardinali, Paul Gene and Rick Salter on Wednesdays and Saturdays at the Montauk Yacht Club or Sunday brunch at World Pie; soft jazz at Kipling's in Bridgehampton on Fridays; pop standards with Diana Rogers at East Hampton's Maidstone Arms on Sunday from 5 p.m.

Jazz at The Wild Rose, Bridgehampton, continues this Sunday with the Real Deal (Joe Caro, Anton Fig, Andy

Shanghai Noon and Big Momma's House

MASKS OF COMEDY AND TRAGEDY

The face of comedy changes as flippantly as Mission Impossible's implausible latex masks that are ripped off in a flash, revealing either venerable truth or flash-in-the -pan exploitation. The pans flashed currently in the ethnic-humor based movies, Shanghai Noon and Big Momma's House, are meant to punch our socio-racial prejudices and contradictions in the nose. Sure, it hurts. Big Momma's black face, in-your-face comedy of Martin Lawrence, hurts most because it continues to present blacks in a way that, a few years ago, would have had even the old, Aunt Jemima in a flap, flipping her flap jacks and her red bandana! Whereas, Shanghai Noon presents Jackie Chan's sunny, smiling, "Have A Nice Day" face, with his fancy Hong Kong footwork, in our old Wild, Wild West...with other Chinese immigrants (pig tail and all) kicking at our funny bones...hoping to hit stereotypical-cultural nerves with farce. Sensitivity is the issue here. Jackie (not Charlie)Chan is on the case, utilizing Buster Keaton-Kung Fu, to rescue a kidnapped Princess and help the beleaguered Native Americans.

F.B.I. MAN AS A FAT HEAD WITH THIN MATERIAL

As an F.B.I. Agent, Martin Lawrence helps himself to out-sized portions of sticky schtick as he goes undercover (literally) into a blimp-like mask, disguised as Big Momma, a way, WAY overweight Southern grandma. When she goes off on vacation, he (under blubber) stakes out her house with fellow agent (Paul Giamatti) to nab a killer/ bank robber, who is the ex-boy friend of Big Momma's grand-daughter. The murderer (Terrence Howard) had escaped prison and is out to get Momma's estranged grand-daughter (Nia Long), who has returned to reunite with Big Momma and hide from the Killer, Lawrence, of course, has the usual jokes impersonating a woman with the lovely Ms. Long living in. And, he gets the usual laffs delivering a baby with a plumber's plunger and a mess of pork chops with hot hysteria. Nobly surviving are: Ms. Long and Mr. Howard who performed better than the movie required.

OVERSTUFFED DRAG

Once Mr. Lawrence gets under that latex mask...it's a long, long time before he rips off the inflated concept he'd ripped-off from Eddie Murphy's Klumps characters in The Nutty Professor . He obviously enjoys over-playing inside all that wobbly sponge... as broadly stretched as the body itself. But like the false body parts, his performance is all exterior. Inside the make-up...nobody's home. Big Momma is another gratuitous, slapstick slap at dignity...as dark and hurtful as burnt cork, Minstrel Show hokum.

NIMBLE JACKIE IN AN O.K. CORRAL

SHANGHAI NOON starts off on the wrong, fancy, butt-kicking foot with two pungent puns...Shang-HIGH NOON...get it? And, Chan, as a 19th Century Imperial Guard of the Forbidden City, is named, Chon Wang...pronounced, John Wayne...get it? So, moving on from those saddle sore points, the script soon gets up a head of steam and wittily intertwines East and West with the intercultural cleverness of a chu-chu twain coasting downhill. With Chaplinesque and Keaton reverence, Chan adroitly tosses Hong Kong Action with over-cooked Spaghetti Westerns (Kung Fu movies already contained a lot of meat ball sauciness) and so, when Jackie, in full satiny regalia, enters a hostile saloon and a fight ensues...the circle is complete and fantastic!

The odd-coupling of Chan with Owen Wilson as a Sundance Kids' buddy team has "sequels!" dancing in the producer's minds. Wilson is no Robert Redford, but can be as obtusely White and goofily bland as Silver Cup bread. I say, HI HO... get 'em up Scout! There's enough high-minded, kiky, spoofy adventure in this low-comedy, almost politically correct Chinese opera with horses, to bruise any ego.

Guy- Jean de Fraumeni is the producer, writer and director of award-winning films for ABC, NBC, PBS and European feature films. He is assisted in this column by Sarah Halsey who hosts with him the Dan's Paper's "They Made the Film Here" Film Festival.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

It is rare that my husband ever requests a specific dish for any meal (it would be helpful if he did) and so I asked him what he would like to eat on Father's Day. His answer was, decidedly, "steak. "Men like a good steak," he said.

Hearing his answer brought to mind one of the simplest, yet one of the most succulent of beef dishes, the renowned bistecca alla Fiorentina. I can still see the massive grill in a restaurant I visited while touring with students in Florence, Italy, a number of years ago, where the steak is famous. Thick T-bones of the highest quality cooked on a very hot grill — the key to its success. Italians cook their steak rare and usually douse it with a healthy squeeze of fresh lemon juice. The combination of the rich, red meat and tart juice is exceptional.

Whatever you may be grilling this Father's Day weekend, it is particularly useful to consider two or three do-ahead buffet dishes to complement your barbecue. An assortment of salads, such as a rice or vegetable salad can be prepared ahead and served at room temperature. You can prepare any one of these buffet dishes two or three days prior to your barbecue and have a happy, carefree Father's Day.

GRILLED FLORENTINE T-BONE STEAKS

A simple version of the famous Bistecca alla Fiorentina, the succulent beef dish from Florence, Italy. Italians prefer to cook their steak rare with a healthy squeeze of fresh lemon.

Serves 4

2 T-bone or Porterhouse steaks, 1 1/2 inches thick, about 4 pounds
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 - 3 teaspoons coarse (kosher) salt
Freshly ground pepper
Lemon wedges for serving

1. Prepare your grill; If using charcoal, coals should be ashen hot, or set a gas grill to the highest setting.

2. Meanwhile, rub each steak with oil and coat with salt and pepper. Grill the steaks over high heat for 3-4 minutes on each side, for rare to medium-rare. For the best flavor, the steaks should not be cooked beyond medium-rare. If it is necessary to cook beyond medium rare, allow another 2-3 minutes per side. Transfer to a carving board and cut the meat into one-inch slices away from the bone. Serve at once with lemon wedges.

INSALATA DE RISO

This colorful and tasty rice salad import from Italy makes a splendid addition at a barbecue buffet.

Serves 10-12

For the salad
1 1/2 cups short or medium grain rice
3 1/2 cups water
1 small onion, peeled and left whole
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1/2 pound fresh peas or one package frozen peas
1 medium red pepper, cut into small dice
3-4 scallions, trimmed and thinly sliced
1 teaspoon coarse (kosher) salt for the cooking water

Vinaigrette
1 tablespoons Dijon mustard
1 teaspoon coarse (kosher) salt
Freshly ground pepper
3 tablespoons finely chopped Italian flat-leaf parsley
3 tablespoons freshly chopped dill
3 tablespoons white wine or herb vinegar
1/2 cup extra-virgin olive oil

1. Put rice in a 2 1/2 - 3 quart saucepan and fill with cold water. Place onion on top of rice and bring to a boil over high heat. Reduce heat and simmer rice, covered, about 15 minutes, until liquid is completely absorbed. Remove from heat and let stand, covered, 10-12 minutes or until rice is completely cooked and appears dry on the surface. Remove onion and discard. Add lemon juice and fluff with a fork. Spread rice on a large plate to cool, then place in a bowl, covered with plastic wrap to chill for several hours or overnight.

2. In a mixing bowl combine mustard, salt, pepper, herbs and vinegar. Stir to mix with a wire whisk. Gradually whisk in the oil in a slow steady stream until ingredients are thoroughly blended.

3. If using fresh peas, cook them for 3-4 minutes in salted boiling water, or defrost frozen peas and cook 1-2 minutes in salted boiling water. Drain and dry in a clean kitchen towel.

4. Pour dressing over rice, add cooked peas, red pepper and scallions. Fluff rice with two forks to distribute the ingredients well. Transfer to an attractive serving dish and serve at room temperature.

JAPANESE VEGETABLE SALAD

An arrangement of vegetables, cut into thin sticks is lightly dressed with a sesame vinaigrette, Japanese style. The vinaigrette is attributed to Elizabeth Andoh, friend and colleague, and authority on Japanese cuisine. You can increase the vegetable and dressing ingredients below to accommodate additional servings.

Serves 6-8

For the vegetables
2 carrots, trimmed and peeled
2 zucchini, scrubbed and trimmed
2 cucumber, peeled and seeded
2-3 ribs celery, trimmed and washed well

Sesame vinaigrette
2 tablespoons Japanese rice vinegar
2 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons light miso (bean paste)
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 tablespoon dark sesame oil
1 tablespoon white sesame seeds, toasted
1/4 teaspoon superfine sugar, (optional)

For serving
1 bunch watercress, washed and spin-dried
1 cups bean sprouts

1. Cut carrots into halves or quarters lengthwise then cut into 2-inch length sticks. Repeat with zucchini, cucumber and celery. Be sure the vegetables are clean and dry before dressing with the vinaigrette. Can be prepared ahead and refrigerated, securely wrapped in plastic bags.

2. Prepare vinaigrette: In a bowl, combine all the ingredients, whisking lightly to ensure even distribution. Chill the dressing, use on vegetables or salad greens. Can be refrigerated in a suitable container for up to one week.

3. When ready to serve toss the vegetables with enough vinaigrette to coat them. Place the watercress, sprinkled with a bit of the vinaigrette, on a large platter and arrange the vegetables on top. Scatter the bean sprouts over the vegetables and serve.

Critical Blood Shortage In New York

Due to an alarmingly low blood inventory, especially Types 0 and B, New York Blood Center (NYBC) and its five operating regions have declared an emergency blood donor appeal effective immediately and expected to last throughout the summer, it was announced today by Dr. Robert Jones, NYBC President and Chief Executive Officer. Anyone eligible to donate blood is being urged to call NYBC toll-free at 1-800-933-BLOOD (2566) to make a donation appointment at one of many permanent or mobile donation locations in New York City, Long Island, northern and central New Jersey and the Hudson Valley region. Walk-in donors are also welcome.

NYBC's current blood inventory is as low as 8,000 pints (vs. a desired 14,000 pint or more inventory) with less than a two-day supply of Type 0 and B blood. "This is far less than our typical five-day supply needed to adequately supply daily patient demand for some 200 hospitals in New York and New Jersey," pointed out Dr. Jones. "We have already regrettably reduced blood deliveries to some area hospitals, placing patients and possibly the entire metropolitan community at risk."

The area's low blood inventory is due to several factors including the historical low donor participation rate among New York and New Jersey residents as well as recent donor criteria revisions. "Less than two percent of eligible area residents actually donate blood compared to five percent in most other parts of the U.S. And within New York City, the donor participation rate drops to less than one percent"explained Dr. Jones. At the same time, demand for blood is rising due to an aging population, an increase in cancer diagnoses requiring aggressive chemotherapy with transfusion support and more sophisticated medical and surgical procedures (i.e., liver, heart and bone marrow transplants). Additionally, in April all eligible donors who have spent a cumulative six months or more in the United Kingdom between 1980-96 have been prohibited from donating blood due to a Food and Drug Administration (FDA) guidance related to alleged "mad cow" disease transmission. "Due to the large concentration of multinational and financial organizations in the New York area, we estimate this donation criteria revision has affected two to three percent of our donors," added Dr. Jones. Also, because of its long-standing supply vs. demand gap, NYBC has been reliant on blood imported from other parts of the U.S. and Europe since the 1960s. However, given blood demand increases across the U.S. and resultant shortages, there is little if any blood available for domestic importation, and European blood imports were reduced ten percent in May and projected to decrease even more June through August.

"This reliance on others to support our local community only reinforces why NYBC needs to become a self-sufficient blood collection and distribution organization. But we need community support to meet our goal. That's why I am urging all those over age seventeen, who weigh more than 110 pounds and are in good general health to support the community this summer and to 'Give Blood and Save a Neighbor'," Dr. Jones concluded.

Donating blood takes less than an hour and includes a free mini medical exam (temperature, pulse, blood pressure and iron count). Photo or signature ID is required. – Neil Palmer

Laser Here In The Hamptons, Quick Painless Eye Surgery

LASIK (laser-insight kiratomileusis) is a quick, painless procedure that can correct near-sighted (myopia) far-sighted (hyperopia) or astigmatism. Approximately 1 million people have done this procedure in the USA and it has been gaining in popularity. If your glasses and contacts put limits on your lifestyle or sport related activities then laser vision correction could be for you.

Alexander J. Ricci MD at the Hamptons Laser Vision Center has taken great care to create a state of the art LASIK facility. His plan was to make it affordable and accessible for the people of the East End. Why should people living here have to travel so far in order to take advantage of laser vision correction?

Dr. Ricci is a full time resident of East Hampton. He has been in private practice in Great Neck NY for fourteen years. He is a well-respected and highly experienced ocular surgeon and had been certified in use of the excimer laser since 1993. He performs LASIK surgery at New York Eye and Ear Infirmary and in his own Laser Center in Wainscott. He is able to offer patients greater flexibility in their treatment plan. Patients, who are not full-time residents, can benefit from follow-up visits in his Great Neck office, Wainscott or Manhattan. Surgery can be performed in Manhattan or Wainscott. Saturday and early evening surgery is available as a convenience to his patients.

"This is a true medical miracle," states Dr. Ricci. "I think people should be as well-informed about LASIK and choose the LASIK surgeon carefully as you would choose any surgeon for any other type of surgery. It is wise to inquire if the same LASIK surgeon performing the procedure will evaluate you before the surgery and see you on follow up visits. Be cautious if a different surgeon sees you before or after surgery. Remember this is serious surgery and your Doctor should be available to assess your progress after your procedure."

Not everyone is a candidate for LASIK. To determine if a patient would benefit from this procedure, a detailed history and eye examination is done. This will include screening for glaucoma, retinal and optic nerve disorders, and a rigorous examination of the cornea. This includes a scanning corneal topography with the Orbscan II scanner, the latest technology in detecting hidden corneal aberrations. Prescriptions for glasses ate refined. Patients wearing contact lenses will be advised to remain out of their lenses for a length of time according to their specific situation.

Many of the chain store laser centers owned by large companies employ doctors to do a high volume of surgical procedures in a clinical setting. He expresses concern when marketing hype equates high volume with a doctor's experience. The truly important statistic is the complication rate. High volume does not necessarily correspond with quality care. Dr. Ricci is committed to personal service.

The vision center strives to create a warm and friendly atmosphere where patients are encouraged to ask questions and are invited to view procedures. His staff members are all experienced, certified laser technicians. If requested, arrangements can be made for people to speak personally with other laser patients. Recovery time is quick. The majority of patients are able to return to work the following day.

Over the next few months, Dr. Ricci will be offering seminars on Saturdays from 10am till noon and Monday evenings 5:30-7pm. People can feel free to join in anytime within those hours or schedule a free private examination with the Doctor by calling the center. Look for our open house celebration event sometime in June. The Hamptons Laser Vision Center is located on route 27 (Montauk Highway) across from Cozy Cabins in Wainscott. Telephone: (631) 537-5505 or visit our website at www.hamptonslaser.com

Dr. Ricci and his staff look forward to serving the the East End.

Are You Ready For Tennis This Summer?

By Keri Preng

Are you ready for the summer tennis season in the Hamptons?

This is my first time to take a summer teaching position at The Bridgehampton Tennis & Surf Club. I have taught at several country clubs in the Dallas area for the past ten years. Currently I am the women's assistant coach at SMU (Southern Methodist University) in Dallas, TX. I would like to encourage everyone to get involved in as many tennis activities that are available to you this summer.

Private Lessons: This is for you if you really want to learn the skills of the next tennis generation. You will need to be patient and ready to change some of your habits in order to get the most out of your experience. Try not to spend your lesson doing 15 minutes on forehands…15 minutes on backhands…than 15 minutes on serves. Generally the pro does this because they feel your frustration in learning a new stroke. Don't give up in a lesson or say you can't do it. The pro may find just the right words to help you crack that forehand of yours if you show your determination and positive attitude in getting better. Although it may be boring, you will need to spend sometimes up to 3 months working on your new technique before it breaks your old habits and feels good.

Group Lessons/ Clinics/Drills/Workouts: This is a fun way to learn about doubles strategies as well as have a good workout. The best scenario is with players at the same ability level. Ask for the pro to sign you up for the group situation that best describes what you are looking for. Lessons and Clinics are usually more instructional. Drills and Workouts are for people looking for a more physical workout.

Tennis Camps: Usually camps are 1 or 2 weeks long with an emphasis on an overall tennis experience. Basic stroke production on all the strokes should be covered. When the camp is over you should be able to keep score and play at least beginner singles and doubles. Intermediate and Advanced players will enjoy this experience too, if they are rusty on their skills and looking for a way to meet other players.

Round-Robins/Mixers/Interclub Matches: These activities are designed primarily to help players organize a tennis match with new players. The level of competition may vary widely. The social aspect of tennis is usually emphasized. Very competitive players should stick to Local, State and National Tournaments if they want to play fierce competition. Some players forget the real reason behind these organized events.

Remember that it is your participation that makes a tennis program successful. You may like taking lessons or playing in Round- Robins. Both are good ways to improve your health and keep you playing one of the best lifetime sports today. Don't let another summer go by without getting involved. See you on the courts!

Garden and Homes

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

Organic tomato growers have developed a system which is called the weave method. It uses inexpensive materials and is extremely fast to build and easy to maintain. The final effect is a dense hedge of tomato foliage. Even with indeterminate varieties, pruning can be minimal.

Set sturdy one to 2—inch stakes 3 or 4—feet apart down the center of a row or bed and at both ends. The stakes are set between plants, not beside them. If you space tomatoes 18 or 24—inches apart, you have 2—plants between each stake. If you like 3—feet between plants, put a stake between each plant. Determinate varieties will need at least 3—foot—tall stakes; indeterminates require 6—foot stakes.

When the plants get about a foot tall and are in danger of toppling in a wind, make the first tier of baling twine. Tie the twine to an end post and string the twine down the row alongside the tomato plants, wrapping it once around each post. Here is where the weaving comes in: A-run of string between posts should alternate from one side of the tomato row to the other as you go. When you reach the end, begin working the twine back in the opposite direction, stringing it on the side opposite the path you took on your first pass. A week to 10-days later, when the vines have grown up enough to be in danger of toppling, weave another course about 8—inches higher up the stake.

Commercial greenhouse growers train indeterminate tomatoes up strings. This method requires some pruning of side shoots. We recommend inexpensive 2x2 stakes that are 8—feet long. We buy 2x4s and rip them with a power saw. After pounding them into the ground 12 to 18-inches, you'll have a stake that's 6 to 8—feet tall. The bar across the top is made of 10—foot—long 3/4—inch electrical tubing from a building supply store, You flaten 2-inches on each end, then drill a hole in the center of the flattened area an inch in from the ends.

Set the stakes 10—feet apart, lay the bar on top and run one—inch galvanized sheetrock screws through the holes down into the tops of the stakes. The system is very strong, and it comes apart easily in the fall. To train your tomatoes up the string, start when the plants are about a foot tall. Make a loose knot that cannot slip and become tight around the base of the stem just below a sturdy leaf or shoot. Then run the twine to the bar and tie it loosely, leaving about 2—feet of extra line hanging over the top. As the tomato vine grows up, you just wrap the leading shoot around the twine, so the two are braided together. That twisting eventually uses up all the twine you left at the top. When you need slack, you loosen the knot at the top, take what you need, and tie it again.

If you take out all side shoots, you should space plants closely, about a foot apart. It's important to leave enough foliage to protect fruit from sun— scald. If you space your plants 18—inches to 2—feet apart, you can let a few side shoots grow near the base of each plant. Tie on a string for each side shoot and start braiding the sprouts. Unsupported side shoots can tear off the main stem just as the fruits are heaviest and ready to ripen. When shoots reach the top, you top them. This trellis system works well for cucumbers, pole beans, squashes, eggplants and peppers.

Trainting tomato plants to bamboo quadripods is much like training them to single stakes, but the quadripods are very stable and nearly windproof. Bamboo is both very light and very strong. The ends of the canes needn't be pushed very far into the ground, which minimizes decay, and the canes can last for several seasons.

Use seven—foot by 3/4—inch bamboo canes, available at garden centers. Set the tomato plants about 2—feet apart down each side of the garden bed. Stick the bamboo canes into the soil at each plant. Then, at about 6—feet above the ground, lash a pair of canes together with the opposing pair on the other side of the bed to make a series of quadripods down the bed.

Fasten the tomato vines to the canes with 8—inch pieces of twine, tying them at about every flower cluster. Pinch out most side shoots, and tie on any that you want to keep. For added strength, lay bamboo canes across the top to span the row of quadripods. This greatly increases both the stability of the structure and its versatility. Run twine from the top piece to the ground and the system will work well for cucumbers, melons, pole beans and peas you want to trellis.

If you've been using tomato cages, try using the same material a different way. Cages are one of the simplest and most popular training systems, but they become top—heavy as the plants mature and must be fastened to stakes to keep them from falling over in the wind. Undo the cages and set them on the ground as quonsets, and the system becomes very stable. Moreover, you can let the plants sprawl with no need to tie up or clip errant side shoots. This is how some commercial tomato growers grow their plants.

Use 6—inch—mesh concrete—reinforcing wire, which comes in rolls 6—feet wide. Cut off 6—foot sections to make squares 6—feet on a side. This will make an arch about 18—inches tall across a 30—inch-wide bed. To span a wider bed, the wire may need support in the center to carry the weight of a crop of tomatoE If you cut out the horizontal pieces along the bottom edge, you create 3—inch— long pin to push into the soil. In sandy soil, you may want 6—inch pins.

On wooden raised beds, you may not need pins at all.

Space tomatoes 18—inches apart down the center of the bed. These tunnels are excellent systems for determinate varieties. With indeterminate varieties, just drape any branches that creep into the row back over the top. The 6-inch mesh is big enough to make picking simple.

And the material is versatile. You can use these quonsets for cucumbers, squash and melons, as well as peppers, bush beans and cut flowers. You can easily convert the wire into cages, and it can be straightened partially to stack in winter storage.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

The Regulatory Fairness and Openness Act, Farm Bureau-supported legislation to guide the Environmental Protection Agencys (EPA) implementation of the 1996 Food Quality Protection Act (FQPA), is gaining governmental support. With 229 co-sponsors, it has the majority of the house; a Senate companion bill has 39 co-sponsors. The legislation would ensure the EPAs use of sound science and real-world data, rather than worst-case assumptions determining the average Americans exposure to pesticides.

Before I go any further, it is important to stress two points. The first is that farmers and their families are on the front line of exposure to pesticides. No one is more concerned about any possible risks than farmers. The second is that for the majority of American farmers, crop protectants are an indispensable tool. Without it, the quality and abundance we now enjoy will disappear and without the ability to produce, most farms would go out of business. The issue of pesticides is an emotional one. This is why Farm Bureau, as the voice of the farmer, strongly supports any legislation that enforces the use of sound scientific data to dictate what is or is not safe. By that standard, if a product is found to be truly unsafe, then we wholeheartedly support the removal of that product from use.

Many people are unaware of the rigorous testing todays crop protectants must successfully complete before being placed on the market. The pesticide industry is one of the most highly regulated in the country. After a thorough review, the EPA registers only the uses that pose minimal risks. It takes a chemical manufacturer 8 to 10 years to test and register a product and only one pesticide in 20,000 makes it from the research lab to the market.

Chlorpyrifos (Lorsban/Dursban) is one of the most important, safe and widely used insecticides in the country. It provides effective and economical control of a wide variety of pests and works well in various crop rotations and integrated pest management programs. It is currently registered for use on 44 crops, including apples, asparagus, cauliflower, corn, and many others grown on Long Island. The EPA is expected to announce that this organophosphate exceeds its "risk cup" and will need mitigation. EPA officials have said "the risk for the commodities in question tomatoes, grapes [and apples] is being driven by residue on foreign imports on these commodities." Now some of the uses of this safe product are being canceled for our farmers, and possibly putting some at an outright competitive disadvantage on the world market. This action obviously undercuts U.S. farmers and does nothing for food safety.

Under international regulatory standards (supported by California), there are NO human health risks of concern for chlorpyrifos. The differences between EPA and international standards relate to EPAs new FQPA science policies. They include regulation at a 99.9 percentile of exposure versus the traditional 95th percentile level. If EPA lowered the statistical manipulation by only .2 percent, down to 99.7 percent, "all risk disappears," for chlorpyrifos, said an EPA official. If this product posed an imminent hazard to children or the general public, EPA can pull it immediately. EPA is not doing this and the data doesnt support that. If it did, Farm Bureau would be the first to call for the removal of the product. EPA has said that no imminent threat to the public exists, and therefore the product will not be pulled from the shelves.

This is one reason why the Regulatory Fairness and Openness Act is so important. It will require EPA to use reliable information and data and prevent the loss of any tolerance that has not been fully evaluated using new data or data deficiencies. It will require the Agriculture Department to develop information that identifies the extent to which decisions under FQPA have an impact on our farmers ability to compete with foreign producers. It requires EPA to provide a proposal for revising the agencys priorities and resources so all new registration applications and petitions for tolerances and exemptions can be processed promptly.

Farm Bureau supports FQPAs goals of establishing a public-health safety standard, to help make the worlds safest food supply even safer, and an orderly, reasonable, science driven implementation of this landmark new law, to serve the best interests of public health and American food production alike.

Joseph Gergela III is executive director of Long Island Farm Bureau

POLICE BLOTTER

The wily woodsman struck again in Amagansett. A resident of Oyster Shores Road reported that an unknown arborist cut four cedars in half over the last eight months. The wounded trees were discovered after the man returned from a long absence in Florida. The damage is valued at $3,000.

In a similar attack, a Montauk woman reported that her neighbor has been trimming her hedges without consent. Police are investigating this heinous crime.

East Hampton residents of Galatin Lane reported that youths in nearby Maidstone Park were knocking over trash cans and scattering trash around the baseball field. Police quickly found said youths and made them clean up their mess. No arrests were made.

In other baseball related mischief, miscreants had a home run in a game of mailbox baseball in Water Mill. A Flying Point resident woke up to find the remains of his mailbox scattered across his lawn. The mailbox was valued at $100.

A break in at a Ferncroft Place residence in Montauk resulted in the theft of a bottle of medication worth $500. It is not known what the prescription was.

An East Hampton man was charged with four counts of petit larceny. He was conversing with some motorists on Morris Park Lane, and as they talked, he systematically removed each of the motorist's hubcaps and tossed them into the woods. The motorists allowed this to continue until the car was hubcapless.

George M. Funk of Montauk was charged with second degree assault after he allegedly attacked a man with a wax candle causing severe lacerations.

Somebody entered an unlocked Hampton Bays residence and turned the heat up to 80. The fuel oils abuser also turned the oven on to full blast and shut off some of the electricity. There was also an oily substance left in the pool.

* * *

An employee at the Southampton Burger King reported that someone broke into his car. Among the sweet score of items removed were 12 pounds of peanut M&Ms, six pounds of regular M&Ms, three pounds of Reese's Pieces and $20.

* * *

In Westhampton at the Surf Club, a bouncer thought that a man playfully tugging his friend's arm might be trouble, so he tackled him to the floor. The 22-year-old suffered a scraped cheek and complained of jaw pain but declined to press charges.

* * *

A group of unruly youths have been blamed for placing a car bumper across the railroad tracks, causing the crossing gates at East Tiana Road, Springville Road and Ponquogue Avenue in Hampton Bays to close. The gates remained closed for over an hour until LIRR employees arrived and cleared the obstruction. The youths were not found.

* * *

Also involving the tracks in Hampton Bays, a car was found on the tracks. Police found two cell phones in the car as well as the keys, and they found the owner at the Boardy Barn.

At the Southampton Town Justice Court, not every defendant is happy with the judge's decisions. A 33-year-old man leaving the court banged his head against the wall causing considerable damage to the wall.

A Westhampton woman complained to police that her "friends" charged over $1,100 to her Texaco and Sunoco credit cards. The woman said she had been on an "alcoholic binge" and was passed out in her car at the time.

Dan's LETTERS

HONK, HONK

Dear Dan,

I think it would be real fun if there could b e another dozen traffic lights between Southampton and East Hampton. We would then find out how really brave the "Summer" people, are; also local residents are. The line of cars on Rte 27 (or whatever name you or your town has designated it to be called) would rival Manhattan on any given day, of any given week or year. We in the Hamptons would become celebrities. People would be asked for interviews by newspapers and magazines , asking how it feels to live in the chaos. Probably Channel 4, or even possibly 60 Minutes would be hounding the locals for interviews. By the end of the summer myriads of people would come out of their hibernation in the basements of their homes, which, by the way were stacked with food and other amenities, to bide them over the harsh realities of the summer. Maybe the founding fathers might come up with a solution. A Circle Line excursion boat from Manhattan and out to the East End, or perhaps a Quatraboro bridge spanning the LIE, with the passes to the various Hamptons. The ideas are endless, but I think that the congested highway (our one and ONLY) still conjures up to me a great hearty laugh seeing people stranded in their cars for the weekend, never getting to their hideaways at all. Just give it some thought and you will laugh too.

THE WEDDING BELLS LIMO

Dear Dan,

I'm writing this letter to share my experience. I recently got married. Two months before the wedding I called local limousine company's for price quotes. I got Hampton Hills Limousine, LTD., owned by Tom Hill of East Quogue. Mr. Hill as well as hid drivers were very polite. The limos were on time as well as polite and spotless. He also had the best rates. I can't say enough about this company. They made our wedding day a little nicer because of their great service. Anyone looking for a limo or town car please call Tom Hill, you will be very pleased with the service. We were!

Yours truly,

NATURAL BEAUTIES

Dear Dan,

Your paper's strong article on the loss of Indian Burial land to developers really got my attention. There is a rising tide of opinion for more justice done about the Shinnecock's claim to perserve not destroy ancestral land. If more voices speak out, perhaps they can have a reversal. My state and local funding has preserved a portion of tidal and farm lands that would be gone forever. How about a wild-life re-hab center or other less intrusive use of these disputed acres?

Southampton Town is promoting connecting bicycle paths along Montauk Highway, which suggest we're on the right track to enjoy our natural beauties. This Sunday, June 18, myself and some guests, celebrate the summer soltice at the Clayton and Liberatore Gallery, with emphasis on Nature's gifts.

Rated The #1 Tasting Vodka In The World.

In 1998, the Beverage Testing Institute of Chicago conducted a blind taste test of more than 80 vodkas. They awarded points based on smoothness, nose, and most importantly, taste. Of all the vodkas, Grey Goose® Vodka emerged victorious, receiving 96 points out of a possible 100.

Founded in 1981, the Beverage Testing Institute conducts tests in a specially designed lab that minimizes external factors and maximizes panelists' concentration. The Institute selects judges based on their expertise, and its tasting and scoring procedures are widely praised as the best in the industry.

CHANGE & TOBACCO

At the end of 1998, Philip Morris USA, along with other major tobacco companies, reached an unprecedented agreement that fundamentally changed how tobacco is marketed, promoted and advertised in the United States.

Among other things, the agreement imposes numerous restrictions identified by the public health community as measures that are aimed at reducing the use of tobacco products by minors.

The changes brought about by the agreement are consistent with our goal to responsibly market our products to adults who choose to smoke. You've probably noticed some of the more visible changes, like the removal of our tobacco advertising on billboards; but there have also been other significant changes.

That is why we're here, in this space, in this publication: to share with you in the coming months the changes that have taken place and the things Philip Morris USA is doing to address tobacco-related issues.

Our purpose is not to debate, but instead to open a dialogue. For instance, we want to help address the problem of underage smoking and the issue of cigarette smoke in public places.

We believe we have a role to play as society addresses issues, and we'd like to let you know what our company is doing.

One thing is clear: the changes brought about by the Master Settlement Agreement—as well as other initiatives we are undertaking that go beyond the agreement—provide us with an opportunity to move forward and resolve tobacco-related issues.

We believe opening this dialogue will help bring us more in accord with public expectations of a responsible company in a changing world. For more information, visit our Web site at www.philipmorrisusa.com. If you don't have Internet access, please call 1-877-PMUSAWEB.
